Whelchel's Campaign Expenses Being Probed by U. S. Grand Jury

ROGGE TO ARRIVE TODAY TO ASSIST IN INVESTIGATION

Certified Copies of Expenditures Scanned by Jurors; Congressman Is Silent About Case.

The campaign expenses of Congressman B. Frank Whelchel, of the ninth Georgia district, were under investigation yesterday by the federal grand jury in Atlanta. It was learned authoritatively by The Constitution.

Several residents of the ninth district were witnesses before the jury yesterday morning and others were under subpoena to appear today.

Start of the federal probe came on the eve of the arrival here of John Rogge, assistant attorney general of the United States, who has just completed handling federal cases in the Long investigation in Louisiana. Here also was Louis Schwartz, of Washington, a Department of Justice attorney, Expenses Itemized.

It was known that certified copies of the itemized campaign expenses of Congressman Whelchel were in the hands of the grand jury here.

Whelchel and Lawrence S. Camp, district attorney, both refused any comment on the investigation, Camp asserting "I do not care to discuss it," and Whelchel declaring "I have no statement to make."

R. W. Smith, of Gainesville, clerk of the superior court of Hall county, was under subpoena to appear before the jury but said last night over long-distance that he had been ill and had been released from appearing.

He said, however, that he had sent to the district attorney's office in Atlanta the certified copies of Whelchel's campaign expenses, which candidates for political office are required to file following primaries and elections.

"Nothing To Say."

W. S. Elliott, of Canton, president of the Bank of Canton, said that he also was a witness before the jury yesterday shortly before that body was discharged for the day in the presence of Judge William H. Barrett, of Augusta, who was sitting for Judge E. Marvin Underwood, who was ill.

He testified concerning clearance of a certain check by his bank, he said, but he refused to say whose name was signed to the check or to whom it was made.

Whelchel was reached by The Constitution in Gainesville last night.

"I have nothing to say about the matter," he declared, but he announced that he intends running for re-election this year.

Delay Attack, Give Concessions, Duce Said To Have Told Hitler

Mussolini Swiftly Arranged Brenner Conference After Learning Germany's Stiff Peace Proposals Were Doomed, High Vatican Source Says.

ROME, March 18.—(UP)—Premier Benito Mussolini urged Fuehrer Adolf Hitler at his Brenner pass conference today to delay a threatened German "great offensive" and agree to concessions which might lead to a compromised peace, it was understood tonight by a high Vatican source in close touch with diplomatic activity.

This source, in close contact with events which have climaxed the fact-finding tour of Europe by Sumner Welles, President Roosevelt's envoy, said Germany had outlined an 11-point proposal for peace. Welles found its provisions unacceptable and they were scoffed at in Paris and London, the informant said.

Mussolini, according to this source, learning from Welles that Hitler's proposals were doomed to failure unless further concessions were made, swiftly arranged the dramatic meeting in Brenner's snows after Welles arrived in Rome Friday night with discouraging news regarding the peace outlook.

It was understood the 11

German points, on which the Welles' mission declined to comment, were not actual peace terms but more in the form of "feelers" which would be elaborated.

The Vatican source said Welles urged II Duce to see Hitler immediately and inform him the proposals were unacceptable and there must be further concessions if any peace movements is to be possible.

Whether Mussolini was able to obtain from the German chancellor such further concessions was shrouded in the Italo-German official secrecy which cloaked the meeting. However, the fact that Mussolini emerged from the two and a half hour talk aboard his private railway coach in a cheerful mood while Hitler was stern and contemplative led to speculation Mussolini may have been successful to some extent.

It was believed II Duce at least saw hopes of keeping alive the spark of peace lighted by Welles' tour.

The German peace proposals said to have been given

LINER QUEEN MARY TO BE TROOP SHIP

Secret Preparations Being Made in N. Y.; Mauretania Involved.

NEW YORK, March 18.—(AP)—Secret preparations to make Australian troop transports of Britain's 81,000-ton liner Queen Mary and its 35,000-ton new Mauretania were under way here tonight.

Both opulently built for the luxury trans-Atlantic trade of peacetime, they have come here under dirty gray camouflage paint, the Queen Mary since the outbreak of the war and the Mauretania for some three months.

Not Officially.

The British Admiralty's decision to put them in the troop service was not made known officially, but the intention was disclosed with the arrival late in the day, aboard the British steamer Antonia, of 770 officers and men to supplement the skeleton crews which have been manning the Mary and Mauretania at their quiet piers.

(In London, the Admiralty would not comment.)

While the owners, the Cunard-White Star line, acknowledged the presence of an additional corps of seamen, a spokesman declined to discuss the job assigned them, saying:

"If the ships are to be placed in service as Australian troopships, you could hardly expect us to admit it at this time."

No Inspection.

United States customs men said, however, that because of information that the Britishers would be transferred by tomorrow to the Queen Mary and Mauretania, it had not been necessary to inspect their baggage.

It was understood that the two ships would sail for Australia Thursday morning, the United Press said.

Painting the Queen Mary a dark gray began today and continued through the night. It was understood that the job was under contract for completion late tomorrow. At the same time some sort of cargo was being loaded aboard the Mauretania.

CURTIS-WRIGHT, ATLAS MERGED

Consolidation Involves $165,000,000; Called Unique Combination.

NEW YORK, March 18.—(AP)—A $165,000,000 merger of Curtiss-Wright Corporation, one of America's largest aircraft manufacturing companies, and the Atlas Corporation, one of the nation's principal investing companies, was announced tonight by the management of the two giant corporations.

Floyd B. Odium, 48-year-old financier, who built up the Atlas Corporation in 10 depression years to its present $60,000,000 market-value status, joined in the announcement with George N. Armsby, chairman, and Guy W. Vaughan, president, of Curtiss-Wright.

Leader in Aviation.

Curtiss-Wright with its predecessors has been a leader in aviation since the Wright brothers' pioneering days. The current market value of its stocks approximates $105,000,000.

The plan of merger will be submitted within three weeks to stockholders of both companies for their approval.

Officials of the companies involved said the merger would not only take advantage of the present wartime boom in aviation, but also would provide $36,500,000 of liquid capital for the development and promotion of peace-time aviation.

Unique Marriage.

The consolidation was regarded in financial and aviation circles not only as a unique marriage of established capital with industry, but also as the largest financial development of aviation history.

Financial experts said the merger would place Odium—who is the husband of the record-holding woman pilot, Jacqueline Cochran—in control of the largest block of stock of Curtiss-Wright corporation, and, consequently, establish him as one of the world's leading aviation figures.

The management of Curtiss-Wright will be able to use the $36,500,000 "liquid capital" available through the merger to assist in turning out the present backlog of unfilled military and transport plane, engine and propeller orders recently estimated at $170,000,000, compared with $33,000,000 as of January 1, 1939.

ITALY IS PREPARED TO JOIN NAZIS IN WAR, BERLIN SAYS

Extension of Axis to Moscow Reported Agreed; Hitler, Duce Hold Parley on Train.

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER.

BERLIN, March 18.—(AP)—Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini held a sudden, momentous conference in a railway car on their common frontier at the Brenner pass today from which Germany emerged with these certain expectations:

1. That Italy is ready to join the European war actively on Germany's side if and when needed, and

2. That the Rome-Berlin axis would be extended to Moscow soon, perhaps before the week is over.

A "Safety Ring."

German-Italian aims for remodeling Europe will be endorsed by Moscow, excellently-informed sources said, as a third partner, Germany does not expect, however, that Russia will become a belligerent.

In Rome, where the only official comment on the conference was that it was "cordial," neutral observers believed that Hitler enlisted Italy's aid to seal a "safety ring" around Germany, perhaps by neutralizing the Balkans against a British-French war offensive by making a series of pacts with the small southeastern countries.

Well-informed Rome sources said that neither Rome nor Moscow had made a move thus far toward a rapprochement, but they admitted that Germany might enter into negotiations with Russia for a three-corner arrangement.

Italy Ready To Fight.

As details of the spectacular meeting in II Duce's private car at Brennero, on the Italian side of the frontier, trickled through to Berlin, it appeared that the two statesmen agreed that Italy would join the war on Germany's side if it should become desirable for her to abandon her present status in which she is "not neutral and yet not waging war."

The German Fuehrer was believed to have sought assurance that if Germany starts an offensive against the Maginot line and loses hundreds of thousands of soldiers, Italy would then consider the question of throwing her military weight in the Nazi scales.

While Hitler and Mussolini talked, United States Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles had an audience with Pope Pius XII.

BOARD INSTRUCTS LAWYER TO DRAFT REPLY ON RELIEF

Statement Will Be Designed To Answer Constitution Story That Jury Is Being Ignored.

Fulton county commissioners, meeting in special session yesterday to draft an answer to a story, written by W. M. Hines, city editor, appearing in Sunday's Constitution in connection with the 1940 relief tax, adjourned without preparing the answer but did refer the matter to the county legal department and the county auditor.

It was agreed that some member of the legal staff should draft the commissioners' statement answering the story, and submit it to the commission for approval before releasing it for publication.

The statement is designed to answer a story which said in effect that county commissioners were ignoring the grand jury's recommendations on the matter of setting the 1940 relief levy.

Both the present and retiring grand juries recommended a tax increase of one-half mill, but stipulated that the money raised by the increase should go to provide food, clothing and shelter for unemployed.

Under the tentative setup of the budget for 1940, only about $81,000 of the anticipated $135,000 increase will go to direct relief clients.

Officials Present.

The meeting was attended by Commissioners E. L. Almand, Troy Chastain, Dr. C. R. Adams and I. Gloer Hailey; Hughes Spalding, head of the county's legal department; County Auditor James L. Respass; Kendall Weisiger, foreman of the present grand jury, and Aubrey Milam, foreman of the January-February grand jury.

Mr. Milam, in answer to a question by Commissioner Hailey, told the commissioners his grand jury in recommending a 2 3-4 mill levy was of the opinion that this one-half mill increase would raise approximately $135,000 which should go to buy food, clothing and shelter.

He said his jury understood that the 2 3-4 mill rate was to be a ceiling for all relief expenditures.

Mr. Weisiger said his jury understood that the one-half mill increase would only produce about

Text of Judge Deaver's Order Denying Rivers' Plea for Writ

Federal Judge Deaver's order last night denying application of Governor Rivers' counsel for a supersedeas follows:

W. L. Miller, Plaintiff,

Versus

E. D. Rivers, Governor of the State of Georgia, and John E. Stoddard, Adjutant General of the State of Georgia, Defendants.

Notice of appeal having been filed in this case, application for an order of supersedeas has been presented. Counsel for both sides being present have expressed their views for and against the propriety of a supersedeas order.

A state superior court has adjudicated plaintiff's right to hold his office and has enjoined interference with him in the occupancy of his office and in the performance of its duties. Those judgments have been appealed to the supreme court of Georgia, but the judgment of injunction has not been superseded. Instead of permitting the state court order of injunction to be complied with, the defendant, E. D. Rivers, Governor, prevented it from being enforced, not by the civil process of supersedeas as provided by law, but by military force, thus unlawfully using the military as a supersedeas of a judgment in a civil case.

In this case the defendants, by interloper order, were enjoined from interfering with plaintiff in occupying and performing the duties of his office. Instead of complying with the order, the defendants, by military force, prevented plaintiff from even entering his office and are continuing to do so, the defendant, Rivers, being reported in the press, as later shown by evidence to be true, as making it perfectly clear that he had no intention of complying with the order.

Upon citation for contempt of court, defendants, appearing by counsel, were adjudged in contempt. Defendant, E. D. Rivers, was taken into custody and brought before the court to be dealt with as for contempt. He requested a postponement until he could confer with counsel, promising to appear again before the court on Friday, March 22, 1940.

It is reported in the press, as shown by the attached articles from The Atlanta Constitution, that the defendant Rivers has everything in readiness to declare martial law around the federal building in Macon and, when he appears on next Friday, to station a military force of 6,000 men and 300 officers around said federal building in Macon to prevent the execution of any judgment that might be made at that time.

It is stipulated by counsel that Leo Farrell, who wrote the articles in the newspaper, would testify, if present, that the articles are accurate and authentic in every detail. The Governor, by a telegram here-

'COMPLETE STONE MOUNTAIN'—HILL

Funds Sought for Art Center and To Finish Confederate Memorial.

A proposal to raise by subscription $750,000 to complete the Confederate Memorial on Stone Mountain and an additional $250,000 to promote fine arts in a program to make Atlanta the "art center of the southeast" was made here yesterday by Walter C. Hill, president of the Atlanta Art Association, before the Atlanta Rotary Club.

"Thus, with the Cyclorama, the beautiful city with its music and its colleges, the university center, the city would have title to 'Atlanta the Art Center,'" Hill declared.

Two Heroic Ventures.

Speaking on "Art Interest in Atlanta," Mr. Hill said: "As a community, we have two of the heroic art ventures of the world. One we are using and can be proud of; the other we are neglecting and are ashamed of."

"The Cyclorama is tops in its class. It is a masterpiece of organization and execution. Stone Mountain is waiting. It rests there with the hurt it bears, but still a magnificent opportunity."

Describing what he called the "Mystery of Stone Mountain," Hill declared:

"There are in the United States Treasury 3,500,000 Stone Mountain Memorial half-dollar coins. Isn't it a mystery that no one has had the wit to figure out how to use them? Isn't it a mystery that with all the politicians, promoters, bankers and Rotarians we have in this country, these millions should have lain there undisturbed for 15 years?"

Personal Fortunes.

"There is an undetermined but large number of personal fortunes in this country big enough to do this job with Stone Mountain, whose owners are looking for something big to do. Isn't it a mystery that none of them chose Stone Mountain?"

"There are literally thousands of people in the southeastern states, especially in Georgia and particularly in Atlanta, who would make profit out of Stone Mountain."

SENATE PASSES HATCH EXTENSION

500,000 Employees in State, Local Governments Are Affected.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—(AP)—The senate today passed legislation making the Hatch anti-politics law apply to an estimated 500,000 employees in state and local governments. The vote was 58 to 28. Senator George and Russell, of Georgia, voted for the bill.

The bill now goes to the house where only today Speaker Bankhead said he was "not in favor" of it. There, opponents hope to pigeon-hole it for the session.

Sponsored by Senator Hatch, Democrat, New Mexico, the measure would apply to state employees paid partly from federal funds the same restrictions against political activity which now are applied to federal workers.

Democrats Split.

The bill brought a sharp split in Democratic ranks during two weeks of bitter debate.

As passed, the bill contains: A provision limiting individuals' campaign contributions to $5,000 a year.

A prohibition against state-federal employees using their official influence to affect an election or coerce their subordinates.

Authorization for the Civil Service Commission to determine when a state-federal worker has engaged in political activity and then to instruct other government agencies which issue loans and grants to withhold a portion of the federal funds unless a worker who participates in politics is dismissed. The money withheld would be equal to twice the annual salary of the state-federal worker involved.

(Governors, lieutenant governors, mayors and heads of state executive departments, and incumbents in elected offices, are exempted.)

(Under the bill the government is empowered to withhold in federal-grant-in-aid funds to states twice the amount of the annual salary of a worker found guilty of violating the act, the United Press said.)

GOVERNOR TOLD TO BE PRESENT AT MACON FRIDAY

Decision Holds Miller Entitled to Office; Says That When Courts Are Defied, Rights Go.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

VALDOSTA, Ga., March 18. Upon agreement between attorneys for Governor Rivers and W. L. Miller that L. A. Farrell, a reporter for The Con-

'STORY ACCURATE,' FARRELL ASSERTS

The statement by Governor Rivers in Chitaucooga yesterday that he had not authorized a story revealing his plans to use the national guard to avoid a possible federal court sentence and that he had "not even made my plans," drew from L. A. Farrell, Constitution reporter who wrote the story in question, the following statement:

"The news story is accurate and authentic in every detail."

stition, if called as a witness, would testify his article appearing in The Constitution Sunday to the effect that Governor Rivers intended to use the National Guard to protect him at the contempt proceedings at Macon next Friday, was "accurate and authentic in every detail." Federal Judge Bascom Deaver tonight denied an application for supersedeas filed in court here today by attorneys for the Governor.

The supersedeas petition had been sought by Governor Rivers to gain postponement of the contempt hearing and enable him to appeal to the fifth circuit court of appeals at New Orleans.

"No Harm . . . in Court Rule."

In his decision Judge Deaver ruled "no harm or injury can result to either of the defendants (Governor Rivers and Adjutant General John Stoddard) or the public from permitting the plaintiff (W. L. Miller) to occupy his office or perform its duties pending appeal. If the supreme court of Georgia renders any decision to expel the plaintiff from office it will then be time enough to put him out."

In commenting upon the use of the national guard by Governor Rivers to keep Miller from his office Judge Deaver said:

"When state and national courts break down and can be prevented from enforcing their orders, no citizen has any rights, because rights are as nothing if there were no machinery to enforce them."

Miller Entitled to Office.

"As matters now stand, the plaintiff (Miller) is entitled to be in his office under order of both state and federal courts and would be in it except for military force used in defiance of both courts."

The order of Judge Deaver further said, "it is reported in the press as shown by the attached article from The Atlanta Constitution that the defendant Rivers has everything in readiness to declare martial law around the federal building in Macon and when he appears on next Friday to station a military force of 6,000 men and 300 officers around said federal building in Macon to prevent the execution of any judgment that might be made at that time."

The federal court battle which preceded Judge Deaver's order waged today around three issues: They were:

1. Whether attorneys for Governor Rivers would have attorneys

CITY WILL SEEK 12 MILLIONS FOR CIVIC PROJECTS

Council Takes Steps To Obtain Aid for Three-Year Program of Improvement in Atlanta.

City council yesterday approved measures looking towards a long-range civic development program for Atlanta as Council John A. White, chairman of a special council contact committee, announced that a three-year plan calling for the expenditure of $12,000,000 for streets, hospitals, schools, etc., will be formulated within the next few weeks.

A resolution asking members of the Georgia delegation in congress to vote to eliminate federal requirements that sponsors pay 25 per cent of the costs of projects and another resolution calling for co-operation of department heads in preparing the city's list of preferential projects were passed by unanimous vote.

Councilman White and Aldermen G. Dan Bridges and Raleigh Drennon, member of the committee to expedite WPA work, previously had estimated a $9,000,000 program would be needed to take full advantage of federal assistance.

Chute of Mixer Maims One Man; Another Falls In

Two Negro workmen were injured in a freak accident yesterday at Moreland and Confederate avenues.

Ed Daniel, 25, of 561 Perry street, S. E., suffered a broken back when he was struck by the "skip" or "chute" of a concrete mixer as it was being lowered to the ground.

Almost at the same instant, Tally Ellison, 26, of 392 Elm street, lost his balance and fell from a truck loaded with material and landed in the mixer. Both were admitted to Grady hospital.

RUSSELL PRESENTS SENATE FARM BILL

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS, Staff Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Expressing regret that the Bureau of the Budget's economy ax slashed agricultural estimates for the next fiscal year more than half a billion dollars, Senator Russell, of Georgia, chairman of the subcommittee on agriculture of the senate appropriations committee, today laid before the upper chamber a measure carrying $22,864,668, an increase of $208,968,584 over the bill as it came from the house.

The largest items of increase in the senate bill were $212,000,000 for parity payments to farmers and $85,000,000 for the disposal of agricultural surpluses.

The house had made drastic reductions even under budget estimates, which had already been pared to the bone.

"The farmers' share of federal appropriations contained in this bill," Senator Russell declared, "has been cut more than the average reduction in the entire national budget."

BURGLAR IMBUE WITH EASTER SPIRIT

Windows Smashed for Rabbit, Watches, Hats.

A burglar possessed of the spirit of Easter early yesterday morning seized a plaster rabbit from a Kay Jewelry Company display window at 3 Peachtree street.

Apparently also moved by admiration for punctuality, the burglar took a dozen high-priced watches after smashing the plate-glass window, according to Donald J. Kaufman, store manager.

Burglars also smashed a glass door of the Marcus Clothing Company, 62 Peachtree street, and made off with 15 Easter hats, Atlanta police reported.

LAWYER TO DRAFT BOARD'S ANSWER

$81,000, inasmuch as 2.39 mills had been levied for relief last year. He also pointed out that the 2-3-4 mill rate was to be the maximum.

It was made clear at yesterday's session that the controversy revolves around the inclusion in the 2-3-4 mill rate of a special levy for county participation in the state's relief program to aged and blind persons and dependent children.

Milam's Contentions.

While Commissioner Hailey contended that this is a relief matter and should be included in the total levy which the grand jury recommended, Milam explained that this same situation was true last year and although the jury recommended a levy of 2.5 mills, the actual levy for welfare was 2.22 mills with an extra levy of .171 mills for old-age pensions and dependent children and blind.

"How were we to know that the same procedure was not going to be followed this year," Milam asked. "If this had been done, this misunderstanding would not have come up."

Chairman Almand, after the matter had been passed to the legal department and the auditor, said "we are only interested in getting the true facts before the people."

He also took exception to that part of The Constitution story that set out that the county's tentative budget shows several departments will get increased appropriations during the year.

He pointed out that most of these increases are controlled by law and that the commissioners have little if any control over them. He cited, for instance, increased court costs, saying that this was brought about by the addition of several courts which commissioners have opposed all the time.

CIPHER AND CODE

Secret writing—the methods used in transmitting secret intelligence—is a fascinating subject. Codes and ciphers of various complexity are used in transmitting military intelligence, correspondence of spies and espionage agents, in diplomatic, consular and business messages of a confidential character, and of course, lovers from earliest times have devised secret means of communication.

Our Service Bureau has a fascinating booklet on how to write and solve messages in cipher and code. You'll find it intensely interesting. Send the coupon below, with a dime enclosed, to cover return postage and other handling costs, for your copy:

Here's a Few of the Robins Visiting in Decatur

The camera caught this view yesterday of some of the thousands of robins which since last Tuesday have been roosting in magnolia trees on the lawn of a Decatur home. The birds apparently are pausing in a return flight to the north. Their songs can be heard for blocks.

CHIEF GETS THREAT IN FLOGGING CASE

Mathieson Turns Crude Letter Over to U. S. Officials for Action.

A threatening letter, crudely formed of words clipped from newspapers, was received yesterday by Chief George Mathieson, of Fulton county police, as the probe was pressed into flogging outrages known to have taken one life and possibly three.

The letter, which seemed to suggest injury to the chief's two-year-old grandson, Russell Mitchell Timmons Jr., read: "Warned. Call your men off flogging and lottery cases or watch your child and—." Beneath the words was a drawing of a child with bandaged head.

Second Intimidation.

It was given to post office inspectors, who began efforts to trace it. Chief Mathieson, who said the communication was received Sunday night at his Peachtree road home, made only this comment: "Every time I get one of these I'll assign more men to the flogging cases."

It was the second known attempt to intimidate officers. Patrolman E. M. Blount, of the East Point force, previously had reported being warned by a letter to "ease up" in his investigation of the beatings.

Captain William B. Seabrook, in charge of efforts to solve the slaying of Sara Rawls and Benton Ford near McDonough three weeks ago, continued delving into the relations of suspected floggers with at least one of the victims, but was not ready for final action.

Klan Chiefs Meet.

Inquiry along lines suggested by testimony given at Coroner Paul Donohoe's inquest into the fatal flogging of live Gaston was continuing, with the county police and solicitor-general's forces co-ordinated.

It became known that a special meeting of the governing body of the Ku Klux Klan, known as "the Kloneilium," had been held here Sunday. James A. Colcott, imperial wizard of the hooded order, said consideration was given to offering a reward "for proof that any unit of the Klan ever has authorized any flogging."

Colcott issued the following statement to The Constitution: "As much as any citizen of Georgia, the Ku Klux Klan deplores the floggings that have recently taken place in Fulton county. What has transpired has had nothing officially to do with the Klan. I am positive that no local

10,000 Robins Form Choir On Lawn of Decatur Home

Raising a mighty chorus that can be heard several blocks, a flock of more than 10,000 robins, has been making a daily appearance on the lawn of a Decatur home. Hundreds of persons have been gathering to watch the birds arrive.

The birds, apparently pausing here on a return flight to the north, come to rest at about 5 o'clock each afternoon in the magnolia trees on the property of Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Nicholson, at 2740 Alston drive.

The robins swoop down from the skies in groups of 100, until the more than 10,000 have assembled within an hour.

Mrs. Nicholson said the birds first came last Tuesday, and have been coming since. The robins resume their flight early in the morning, flying toward the East Lake Country Club and soon disappearing from view, for they have not been traced beyond the golf course.

After the mass flights, there is not a robin in the section, Mrs. Nicholson said. It is the first time such a great flock of robins has paused in the Atlanta area.

DECATUR TO HOLD NEW SING PROGRAM

Popular 1939 Events Will Resume Tonight.

Decatur's community sing programs, which last year attracted thousands of participants from the community, will be resumed at 7:30 o'clock tonight in the municipal auditorium.

Sponsored by the Decatur Lions' Club, music will be furnished by the Boys' High school band, the Girls' High School orchestra, and the Girls' High School Glee Club.

This will be the first sing program of the year, and the plan will be continued if it meets with results comparable to last year.

Walter Herbert and Mrs. Ruby W. Brown will lead the singing.

BOY'S FATHER ASKS REHEARING ON CASE

New Testimony Presented in Custody Litigation by Californian.

Judge E. E. Pomeroy yesterday took under advisement a motion for a rehearing of the case by which Huntley Chapin Sr., of Los Angeles, Cal., is seeking to regain custody of his 12-year-old son, Huntley Jr., from Willard Cummings, the boy's stepfather.

Judge Pomeroy indicated he would rule this morning after hearing new charges submitted yesterday by Lindley Camp, Chapin's attorney, seeking to show that the stepfather associated with persons throughout the county who have criminal records and reputations that, he says, would not be a good influence over the boy.

He also submitted testimony charging that the youth was allowed to visit in this person's home for several days at a time and also charged that the boy had not attended school since March 5. In an amendment to his original petition for rehearing, Camp alleged that the stepfather is addicted to strong drink, but there was no direct evidence on this submitted at yesterday's session.

PEANUTS, TOBACCO MAY BE CURTAILED

Drop in Acreage Indicated in Department's Predictions.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—(P) A 5 per cent drop in the 1940 acreage to be planted to peanuts was predicted today by the Department of Agriculture.

The report estimated 2,296,000 acres of peanuts would be grown for all purposes this year. In 1939, 2,410,000 acres were planted.

The 1940 acreage forecasts and percentage of change from 1939 by states were: Virginia, 174,000, up 5 per cent; North Carolina, 275,000, up 5; Tennessee, 8,000, even; South Carolina, 23,000, up 15; Georgia, 704,000, down 9; Florida, 150,000, even; Alabama, 405,000, down 5; Mississippi, 41,000; up 2; Arkansas, 59,000, up 7; Louisiana, 35,000, down 5; Oklahoma, 52,000, even; Texas, 370,000, down 12.

The 1940 tobacco acreage was indicated at 1,524,100 acres, compared with 1,942,200 harvested last year. The department said this reduction was largely due to sharp curtailment in acreages of the flue-cured and burley types, for which foreign markets have almost disappeared since the war started.

Germany is buying up old phonograph records at the rate of 3,000,000 a year, as a source of much-needed shellac.

WOMAN'S DEATH HELD ACCIDENTAL

Jury Finds Miss Mary Prather Died of Poison.

A coroner's jury yesterday returned a verdict of accidental death from poisoning following an investigation into the death of Miss Mary Prather, 23, of 33 Alexander street, N. W.

Her body was found in the bathroom of her apartment about 1 o'clock yesterday morning by Hinton Newsome, 114 Parker street. According to police her lips were badly burned as if she had swallowed poison.

—Miss Prather is survived by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Prather, Austell; two brothers, M. H. Prather, Atlanta, and Shelton W. Prather, Nashville, and her grandmother, Mrs. J. M. Caldwell, Austell.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start tagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up night, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

PLANNING A NEW HOME?

✓ Don't forget Built-in Telephone Facilities!

You want your new home to be just as neat and pretty as possible. You'd hate to have unsightly holes drilled in shiny new woodwork and exposed wires tacked on spotless baseboards when your telephone is installed. This will not be necessary if you have your telephone facilities built in—like the plumbing.

This modern feature costs very little and is merely a matter of placing simple conduit (or pipe) inside the walls when the house is under construction. The house finished, telephone wires can be run through the conduit and terminated at small, neat wall-plate outlets.

These outlets, to which telephones connect, can be of any number and located wherever you wish. While you may need only one or two telephones now, later on you might want another one. If your home is equipped with well-planned telephone conduit, there will be an outlet ready to receive the additional instrument.

The benefits of telephone conduit are many, yet it costs little and will do much to enhance your home and your pride in it. Consult your architect or builder about telephone conduit, or call the telephone office and ask for "Architects' and Builders' Service."

BOYS' CLUB GIVES TRAFFIC COURT FLAG

Delegation of Youngsters Remedies Situation in Judge Cone's Room.

A group of small boys trooped into Judge John Cone's court yesterday and presented him with an American flag for the recorder's court. They represented the Atlanta Boys' Club, and they gave the flag to remedy a situation that has been worrying them for some time.

Lots of the boys have been visiting various courts to see how justice is meted out, and how not to get in trouble. They were disturbed to find that there was no flag in the traffic court, and Judge Cone if he would accept one as a gift from their club. He told them he would.

So a delegation appeared during court session and formally presented the large silk flag to be a constant reminder to persons in the court of what the flag stands for.

John McKee, 16-year-old mayor of the club, made the presentation speech. "We're presenting not only a flag, but what it stands for—liberty, freedom of speech, equality and justice. And whoever is brought here should be thankful for a flag that stands for these things," he declared.

The boys, accompanied by W. W. Woolfolk, executive director of the club, formed a semi-circle around their mayor and Judge Cone during the presentation. The group included Lonnie Clark, ex-mayor of the club; Ollie Moore, Clinton Morgan, Charles Grady Long, Eugene Spangler and "Vin Spangler."

The little fellows, all but the mayors, are between 8 and 12 years old, caused quite a furor in the court, and took great delight themselves in the ceremony.

MEDICAL LEADERS TO ADDRESS CLINIC

Southeastern Forum on Cancer To Be Held Here March 29.

Dr. Leonard A. Scheele, of the United States Public Health Service, and Dr. Max Cutler, of Northwestern University Medical School, will address a meeting of medical and lay workers interested in fighting cancer in Atlanta March 29, Dr. Ralph Mosteller, of the State Department of Public Health, announced yesterday.

Besides addresses by the medical experts, there will be a general forum with county health agents and health directors from other southeastern states. Dr. Cutler will conduct an afternoon conference at the Georgia Baptist hospital clinic.

Sponsors of the meeting will be the State Department of Health, the cancer clinic of the Medical Association of Georgia, and the Georgia Division of the Women's Field Army of the American Society for the Control of Cancer. The meeting will begin at 10 o'clock in the morning at the Henry Grady hotel.

Dr. Mosteller said reports on activities at the 11 state cancer clinics will be included in the program. The Women's Field Army also will map plans for Georgia's observance of Cancer Control Month in April.

DUNWOODY CLUB TO MEET TONIGHT

New Officers Will Be Named by Community Group.

The Dunwoody Community Club will meet at 7:30 o'clock tonight in the school auditorium for its annual election of officers and a motion picture program, President Leland Bannister said yesterday.

Retiring officers along with Mr. Bannister are Manget Davis, vice president; Mrs. F. E. Kellogg, secretary and treasurer, and Miss Sarah Weaver, DeKalb county home demonstration agent, corresponding secretary.

The club, with a membership of over 70 residents of the community, meets the third Tuesday in each month for the purpose of discussing local civic betterment and improvement. As Dunwoody is an unincorporated town, the Community Club serves as an official body.

President Bannister pointed out that the organization has no dues and is open to all residents of Dunwoody. It has just completed the purchase of 100 auditorium seats through proceeds from motion picture shows.

ARMY WILL ERECT TROOP THEATERS

'Dead Men' (Wooden Slabs) Will Be Used To Anchor Big Tents.

There's a mystery in the United States army! Scores and scores of dead men are going to be buried under two big tent theaters to be built next month at Fort Benning for the benefit of the soldiers who will participate in spring army maneuvers.

But do not become unduly alarmed. Army orders directing the erection of the two tent theaters revealed that there are different kind of "dead men." In this case, the dead men are heavy wooden slabs or maybe iron posts which are buried in the earth to be anchors for tent guy wires.

The tent theaters are to be ready by April 10, when thousands of soldiers in the third army will be stationed at Benning preparatory to marching westward May 5 for the sham war in the Sabine valley of Texas and Louisiana.

DISPLAY TO SHOW PNEUMONIA DROP

Fair Will Reveal Sulfapyridine Results.

NEW YORK, March 18.—(AP)—A display showing a drop of 40,000 in pneumonia deaths in the United States during the past year will be one of the new exhibits at the New York World's Fair this summer.

Sulfapyridine, the new medicine for pneumonia, will be shown as playing an important part in this great saving. Whether the surprising drop from 130,000 deaths in 1938 to 91,000 in 1939, was due to the new remedy is not yet known. Medical reports have pointed to the possibility that some of the decrease in 1939 might have been because of milder types of pneumonia.

However, the exhibit will contain evidence that sulfapyridine last year cured nine out of every 10 persons to whom it was administered.

Other new medical exhibits will include diphtheria, the fact that "man is a constant hazard to man" in spreading disease, and allergies, which are the sensitivity of skin, digestive and respiratory tracts to clothing, feathers, weeds, flowers and food.

U. S. Bureau Grows Turkey To Fit an Apartment Oven

WASHINGTON, March 18.—(AP) The streamlined turkey which the Bureau of Animal Industry has been perfecting for four years met the public today and the public gobbled it up.
"Oh," gasped the lady with the green hat, "There's something at last that will fit the oven."
"Yep," said her husband, "and I believe it's the first turkey I ever saw that I wouldn't be afraid to face alone with a knife. I mean to carve, of course."
The streamlined turkey is one of the features of the barnyard sideshow which the bureau has moved into the fern-festooned patio of the agricultural department. The bird is white and weighs about eight pounds. Beside him is his brother who hasn't been streamlined; he weighs 14 pounds. Apartment houses, small dwelling kitchens, and families that don't include 10 to 15 persons are some of the reasons for the whittled-down gobbler. Turning out this bird has been quite a job, and you can easily tell it's the star of the sideshow.

CHURCH BODY ASKS FOOD FOR CHILDREN

Indorses DeKalb Surplus Commodity Plan.

A DeKalb County Board of Education proposal to use surplus food commodities for needy school children was indorsed yesterday by the Interchurch Social Service group.

In a resolution signed by leading members of the organization, the group went on record as favoring distribution of the food in the form of hot lunches during recesses. Copies were sent Braswell Dean, director of public welfare, and F. C. Shirley, surplus commodities division director.

Signing the resolution, in the name of the group, were: Mrs. Louis F. Reynaud, Mrs. George H. Connor, Mrs. E. J. Clower, Mrs.

HOW MERITA CAPTURED THE SOUTH

With Merita Bread on the table, a successful meal is in the bag! Pardon the informality, but you just can't stay on a high-hoss when you talk about such a satisfying, lip-smacking experience as eating Merita Bread. Husbands have waited an extra half-hour for dinner, smiling all the while—because they had a slice of Merita to tide them over. Small boys cease their rowdiness and become still pictures of perfect peace—at the promise of a slice. The whole family knows something swell has happened to the family menu when mother serves Merita. They fall in love with its fragrant freshness, rich flavor and smooth-eating texture. And they say so. That's why Merita has captured the whole South; it's the fastest-selling bread in the region today. Catch up with the flavor parade; buy Merita today! It's the Lone Ranger's favorite.

Partners For Life

Suspicion faintly stirred within Silver. He knew hated MAN laid traps; he had escaped many of them.

Farther and farther away the men were galloping from where Silver had stopped. Even as he watched, his doubts were effaced, for FRIEND MAN was urging Nellie to her swift gallop, and the rest were doing likewise. Silver's ears pricked to a sharper angle, as he saw puffs of smoke and heard sharp reports. He knew those were guns, and they were meant to harm or to kill. No longer did he doubt. It was a chase.

Silver snorted and plunged to a swift start. His legs flew over the plain in a way he never before had covered distance. The grass whistled beneath the winged-like speed of his body as he shot along like the famed horse Pegasus.

The whizz of a bullet passed the Lone Ranger's head, brought him to attention. He, half-turning in his saddle, urged Nellie to her fastest gallop, as he returned the fire of his pursuers. The bandits increased their speed and their firing.

The first figure, the Lone Ranger, fell. His horse, Nellie, slumping beneath him, with a shattered leg, finally went down.

"They got you, old girl; they got you," said the Lone Ranger pulling free of the stirrups, huddled behind his mortally wounded horse and with a look of hatred flashed at the approaching men, he fondled the horse's head. Then, plunging the barrel of one of his guns against the horse's head, he panted, "I've got to do it, Nellie. I can't leave you to the prairie, if they get me." And he pulled the trigger.

ONE AGAINST FIVE

The outlaws were now almost upon him. The Lone Ranger swung his guns up and opened fire. One outlaw grabbed his shoulder, swayed in his saddle, as his startled horse, rearing, tossed its rider lightly aside, and plunged off over the prairie.

The other four opened fire. A bullet, from one tore through the air. The Lone Ranger bent in pain, closer to his dead horse.

The outlaws did not attack at once, but waited. The figure lay still a minute, then sat up. His guns roared and two horses toppled beneath their riders. While another silver bullet caused a third to yell, as he slumped over his horse's neck, and quickly changed his course to the back trail, only to feel his horse go down beneath him.

The Lone Ranger's shirt was wet with his own blood, and he knew his strength was fast ebbing. He dared not cease firing long enough to bind the wound or to stanch the flow of blood, for fear the outlaws would attack.

Weakly he leaned forward, resting his shoulder on his dead horse's body. Two bullets left, and he could not reload his guns. For the outlaws, from behind their dead horses, were sending a steady rain of lead at him, and he dared not attempt to expose his body. But such a movement was necessary to get his reserve of bullets.

SILVER TO THE RESCUE!

He saved the two bullets. If he could hold himself together long enough to get a hit with each of his two shots, maybe the third outlaw would flee without trying to get him first. Rather a futile hope it seemed. The outlaws, getting no return fire were cautiously raising themselves to attack when—like a mighty locomotive thundering across the prairie, Silver, flashing in the sunlight, came tearing down upon them. Swiftly they turned and beheld the raging horse. Bullets screamed all about Silver but he did not fear bullets. He had come to save his FRIEND MAN. Without stopping for man or bullets he tore into the outlaws. His hoofs crushed one into the dirt while another he sent flying far by a backward kick. A third ran screaming from the terrifying, infuriated, demonic beast, SILVER. His steps were few, for the horse dashed upon him and beat him into the ground, as a hammer hits the nail into wood.

Lifting his head and seeing two fleeing from the scene, Silver would have taken after them, but a groan from the MAN took Silver over to where the Lone Ranger lay by his dead horse.

"Silver, old boy—YOU. I doubted if I would ever see you again, when you left me—"

His voice broke. The Lone Ranger was shamelessly sobbing, as he dragged himself up on one elbow and flung his arms around the ankles of the foam-flecked, panting horse.

Silver bent his proud head and gently nudged his MASTER. And the Lone Ranger, gently stroking Silver's nose, laid his tear-wet face against that of the silver horse. Thus, silently, a bond of fidelity was sealed between MAN and HORSE—the Lone Ranger and Silver. They, in that hour, formed one of the strongest attachments of this earth, the friendship of a noble man and a proud horse, and became PARTNERS OF THE PRAIRIE for life. Hi-Yo, Silver!

WOODRING, EDISON AGREE TO TEST 'DEADLIEST' BOMB

Inventor Wins Show-down After Secret Session With Congressmen; Claims Are Doubtful.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—(P) The War and Navy departments, represented as skeptical but open to conviction, consented today to tests to determine whether a new type of liquid oxygen bomb is the most deadly destroyer yet devised by man, or merely a substitute equivalent to the TNT now in general military use.

Lester P. Barlow, Baltimore inventor, won a showdown on the question when he faced Secretary of War Woodring and Secretary of Navy Edison across a congressional committee table today and asked for a chance to prove that he and a collaborator had developed a bomb capable of keeping an enemy 1,000 miles from American shores.

Upshot of the session was an announcement that a thorough test would be conducted on land and at sea as soon as possible.

After the closed session Don McCloud, Carbondale (Ill.) manufacturer of liquid oxygen explosives, expressed the opinion that liquid oxygen and carbon, major components of Barlow's bomb, were little, if any more, powerful than TNT.

McCloud said he had been experimenting with the explosive for about a year at the request of the War Department and had developed a bomb in collaboration with G. A. Lewis, of New York.

McCloud brought with him a 12-pound container of liquid oxygen, and while committee members and reporters grouped gingerly about, poured some of the boiling liquid into a pan. He dropped a lighted cigarette into the fluid to show that it would burn but not explode in the open air. He has a device for exploding the bomb, but has not disclosed its details.

REGISTRAR NAMED.

JACKSON, Ga., March 18.—Judge Ogden Persons has appointed W. H. Phinazee, of Jackson, as a member of the board of county registrars to succeed the late Judge H. M. Fletcher. Other members are W. J. Bankston, chairman, and R. E. Evans, secretary. The board will meet March 25 and begin to purge the registration list for the April 5 primary. Voters are required to register by March 23.

South Americans Shy of Camera, Spalding Says

Jack Spalding, Constitution reporter, just back from a two-month visit to South America, explains to Sisters Eleanor, left, and Bolling, right, just why taking a camera was in way a waste of time. The natives of Colombia and Ecuador, and of lands in between, are suspicious of cameras, and discourage their use by travelers. Spalding thinks they thought him to be a German secret agent seeking military secrets.

Spalding Back From Journey Covered With Tan, Flea Bites

Jack Spalding, who for the past two months has been covering Colombia and Ecuador for The Constitution—and for his own edification—flew north with the robins yesterday, arriving at the airport beaming happily over the prospect of again sleeping soundly in clean beds and having unlimited facilities for taking showers.

Wearing a heavy sun-tan and the marks of venerable Colombian flea bites, Spalding announced that globe-trotting in the lands to the south was a good thing to do by airplane, but that to take it as he did, down among the people, was something a good Nordic could hardly revel in.

The main complaint Spalding registered was the fact that the utterly delightful, if somewhat unwashed people, could rarely tell a stranger what town it was, what time it was, where the next town was and how long it would take to get there.

Another was the naive manner in which the natives would take an unwary stranger into camp financially—if they could. And another was the food. And another the fact that the goats, the pigs and the chickens frequently shared quarters with the people—even in the hostels.

On the whole, though, Spalding reported the trip pleasant, and could think of little to say about it that he has not already included in his letters home, which have been published in The Constitution.

While away he traveled by boat, train, plane, river-boat, afoot, and on one long trip where no other transportation was available, by taxicab.

But the conveyance he enjoyed most, he reported, was the plane that winged him to Atlanta from New Orleans yesterday.

BRIDGE IS SAVED.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., March 18.—Speedy work by Gainesville firemen saved Thompson's bridge, over the Chattahoochee river, three miles from here, from destruction yesterday afternoon. Making a fast run with the newly-acquired pumper, which went into service last week, they found the structure, one of the few wooden bridges in the section over a major stream, aflame near the center. Officers said it was reported a man was seen running from the bridge shortly before the fire was discovered.

HOPE ABANDONED FOR MINE WORKERS

Eight Bodies Recovered; Death Toll Expected To Reach 73.

ST. CLAIRSVILLE, Ohio, March 18.—(P)—No longer expecting to find life, crack rescue squads bored steadily through fallen rock and deadly gas tonight to reach 65 men entombed in the blast-torn Willow Grove coal mine.

With eight men already known dead, the toll of Saturday's blast was expected to reach 73.

It may be tomorrow before the squads enter the area where the miners were trapped.

More than 100 men, most of them either gassed or injured, were rescued a few hours after a terrifying explosion struck the "drift" mine near the Ohio-West Virginia border. Six bodies were found today.

PLAYWRIGHT DIES IN FRANCE

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE, March 18.—(P)—Major Frank Vernon, 65, theatrical producer and playwright, died of pneumonia today in a British expeditionary force hospital.

INDIANAPOLIS PAIR INDICTED BY JURY

White Slavery Charged to Two Men by Federal Body.

Russell Dager and Walter Newton Brummett, Indianapolis men, who were committed to the federal grand jury last week by United States Commissioner David J. Meyerhardt, were indicted by the jury yesterday on charges of violating the white slave traffic act.

The indictment in three counts charges the men transported Lila Hixon and Mae Richards from Indianapolis to Atlanta and back for "debauchery and for immoral purposes." The girls testified before Commissioner Meyerhardt that the four began a wild party in Indianapolis three weeks before their arrest here.

W. F. Sutherland, Atlanta detective, indicted by the federal grand jury on charges of maltreating Quintar South, small Negro boy, allegedly in order to obtain a burglary confession, was re-indicted yesterday. The new indictment merely cleared up technical errors in the first and involved no new charges, Lawrence S. Camp, district attorney, said.

STORED LIQUOR DECLINES.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—(P) The Federal Alcohol Administration reported today that at the end of 1939 there were 465,024,711 gallons of whisky in bonded warehouses, of which 36,484,494 gallons were four years or more old. The total of all liquor in warehouses declined by a small fraction during the year.

HOLY WEEK EVENTS DRAW CROWDS HERE

Atlantans See 'King of Kings,' Hear Gypsy Smith Jr.

The opening of religious observance week, sponsored by the Atlanta Christian Council, brought crowds of Atlantans to the Fox Theater to see "The King of Kings" and to hear Gypsy Smith Jr. at the Wesley Memorial church yesterday.

The movie, which depicts the life of Jesus, is open to the public without charge at 9:30 o'clock daily this week.

Gypsy Smith Jr., renowned American evangelist, is conducting services each day through Friday at Wesley Memorial church. The Grace Note Trio, under the direction of Robert Guy, furnished music and the Rev. J. L. Baggott presided at yesterday's service.

The pianist for the series is Mrs. C. F. Cole. Other ministers who will preside at the services are Rev. R. Wiley Scott, Dr. W. G. Henry, Dr. John L. Yost and Dr. W. V. Gardner.

The week of religious observance will be concluded at the Easter sunrise service at 6:30 o'clock Easter morning at Grant Field, with Dr. W. A. Sheldon in charge of the music and Dr. Ryland Knight as the principal speaker.

Woman Seizes Needle, Thread, Sews Up Gashes on Own Fingers

Surgical knowledge gained through many years' experience as a member of the Grady hospital auxiliary yesterday stood Mrs. James A. Belflower, wife of an Atlanta attorney, in good stead.

While opening a quart jar, Mrs. Belflower accidentally cut two of her fingers through to the bone. In a quick attempt to stem the profuse bleeding, she procured an orinary sewing needle and prepared for an emergency "operation." After sterilizing the needle over a small flame, she sewed up the fingers without use of an anesthetic, using ordinary thread.

Surgeons at Grady hospital, where she later went for observation, said the sewing job was "perfect." Mrs. Belflower resides at 2097 Delano drive, N. E.

GOVERNOR PRICE OF VIRGINIA PAYS VISIT TO ATLANTA

Old Dominion's Leader Is Guest of Shriners; Confers on Affairs of Order, Bars Politics.

James H. Price, the first Governor of Virginia from Richmond, the capital, in more than 100 years, was a "vacationist" in Atlanta for a few hours yesterday, being the guest here of prominent Shriners.

In addition to being Governor, Price is imperial recorder of the Shrine and yesterday he was talking Shrine business—not politics.

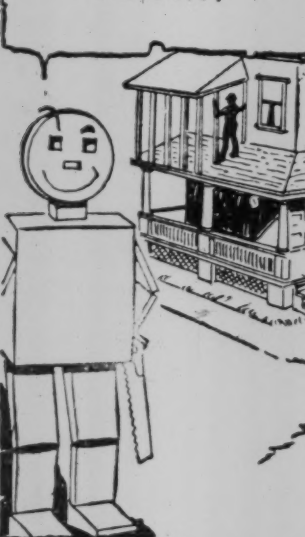

The gray-haired, black-eyed Governor said he has just finished with a session of his legislature and the thought of politics, national and state, was the most distant thing from his mind. "I just dropped in without notice, and I'm going from here to Birmingham," he said. "Maybe I'll go on down to Florida for a little sunshine."

He lunched with Tom Law, past potentate of Yaarab Temple and imperial chief rabban of the Shrine. Barnes Sale, potentate of the temple; Henry Heinz, member of the national board of trustees of the Shrines Crippled Children's hospitals; Frank A. Cundell, recorder of the temple here, and half a dozen other Atlanta Shriners.

KELLEY ANNOUNCES FOR CONGRESS POST

Whelchel To Seek Re-election, Thus Assuring Three-Cornered Race.

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. GAINESVILLE, Ga., March 18.—A three-cornered race for the ninth Georgia district seat in congress was assured late today by rapid-fire announcement from G. Fred Kelley and the incumbent, Congressman B. Frank Whelchel, of their intention to run.

Kelley, solicitor general of the northeastern superior court circuit, announced his candidacy here during the afternoon, and Congressman Whelchel, notified of the action at his office in Washington, immediately announced he will seek re-election in November.

Dr. J. S. Golden, Jasper dentist, already has announced for the post.

Kelley, a native of Gwinnett county, has practiced law here the past 18 years. He was graduated from Mercer University with an LL.B. degree.

He served as Gwinnett county representative in the state general assembly from 1917 to 1920, and was city attorney for Lawrenceville and Gwinnett county attorney from 1927 through 1934, before moving to Gainesville. He served as solicitor of Hall county and was Hall county attorney in 1933 and 1936, and is now serving his second year as circuit court solicitor.

Active in fraternal and religious circles, Colonel Kelley is a member of the Masonic order, the I. O. O. F. and the Junior Order of United American Mechanics, and is a deacon in the First Presbyterian church here.

He married the former Miss Ruth Williams, a native of Gwinnett county, and they have one daughter, Becky Byrd Kelley.

CIVITANS LAUNCH CLUB IN BUCKHEAD

Charter Presented 55 Members in Ceremony Last Night.

Civitan International added another club to its membership last night when a charter was presented to 55 members of the newly formed Buckhead Civitan Club.

Presentation of the charter was made by District Governor James N. Keelin Jr., of the Atlanta Civitan Club. James Andrews, president of the new group, accepted.

Speakers included: Dr. Earl Quillian, of the Atlanta club, past international president; former Governor John M. Slaton; Mrs. J. N. Keelin Jr.; Branch Donelson, field secretary of Civitan International; and Arthur Cundy, of Birmingham, secretary of Civitan International. Cundy was introduced by H. Z. Hopkins, of Atlanta, international treasurer.

Officers of the new group, in addition to President Andrews, are: C. J. Robertson, first vice president; Zack Hagood, second vice president; Dr. George A. LaFitte, secretary; Julian R. DeOvis, treasurer; and Arthur R. Williams, sergeant-at-arms. The meeting was held at Brookhaven Country Club.

MOTHER DISCOVERS BABY DEAD IN BED

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Crider Apparently Suffocated.

A 4-month-old baby was found dead in bed early yesterday morning by its mother; it was reported by police.

The infant, apparently the victim of accidental suffocation or strangulation, was Barbara Ann Crider, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Crider, of 614 Tenth street.

Mrs. Crider told Officers W. J. Smith and W. B. Parham that she made the discovery when she went to awaken the child for breakfast. There were no marks of violence on the body.

In addition to the parents, the survivors include the grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Crider and Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Cleveland. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

ATLANTA, GA., MARCH 19, 1940.

The Schools of Georgia

Georgia, by dint of prodigious financial and political maneuvering, will manage to squeeze through a nominal nine-month school term. It will be one of the few years in the state's history in which a majority of the schools have been kept open for what is regarded as a normal period in other and more wealthy states. By that measurement, it is an excellent achievement and is distinctly encouraging.

But there are other measurements, and merely to be proud of the fact schools have been kept open for nine months is to be blinded to the realities of the state school situation. There is no assurance there will be a nine months' term next year. There is no assurance teachers will be paid even the pittance that has been their lot. And it may seriously be questioned whether Georgia has played fair with her youth in the quality and the direction of their training.

The teachers in the state schools have done a remarkable job, all things considered. They are underpaid, and often never paid. They have stuck to a task that is not for the weak. They are restricted in the manner of their teaching by the tradition-bound customs and habits designed for the days when schools were chiefly for the sons of rich men—when probably 90 per cent of the students continued on to higher educational institutions. What was then nominally free education for all was something entirely different in actual practice. Georgia's illiteracy rating of 10 years ago proves that. In a day when only 17 per cent of high school students can continue on to college, the state continues to prepare all of its pupils for collegiate halls, but not for life.

There has been stirring here and there. In a few schools beyond the high school level there has been an effort to educate youth to the actualities of their life; to concentrate on teaching of trades, farming, and homemaking rather than Latin and Greek—which may be desirable but is of little help when planting time rolls around and a little practical knowledge is the difference between green peas and pellagra.

That is not to say that the education must be entirely practical, for paradoxically, such a course is more than apt to prove impractical. It must continue to be broad, but yet not channeled along paths which prepare only for college. It should be so designed that Georgia's youth which does not attend college can continue education and development at home. It should provide greater vocational training, not in specialized fields, but in the broad sense which would permit later specialization or lifelong, practical every-day use. It should give a background through which short courses and adult education can round out the intellectual and practical life of Georgia's people. In other words, it should be designed for the four-fifths and not the one-fifth.

Georgia's education today is makeshift. And yet no radical changes, no experiments in so-called progressive education are necessary to make it yield the return that might be expected from the expenditure. It is now patterned after that of 50 years ago, with but little consideration of the changing character of the student body.

While spending so much money and making such an honest struggle to provide it, would it not be the course of wisdom to make sure it accomplishes that which we expect of it? It should be brought down to earth, the earth that is Georgia's wealth, the earth that now is washing into the rivers that carry the life-blood of the soil to the oceans.

There are six months before the opening of the new school term. It is time in which Georgia should determine how the state can better meet its responsibilities to youth.

That big neutral who stands outside the war stadium, bawling, "Park your ocean liners, folks!" would be America.

To keep alive the tradition of their May-and-December romance, the new queen of the seas, Elizabeth, should have had the cruiser Essex tagging along.

Of fifty-nine national leaders, listed fifteen years ago, it is estimated that about half are now broke. Are we to understand that nothing recedes like success?

Tragic One in Eight

Unless the injury and death rate for Georgia traffic is reduced, one out of every eight licensed automobile drivers in this state will injure or kill some human being within the next 36 months.

Statistics in support of this startling fact are given in the March bulletin of the State Department of Public Safety. The prediction is based upon the accident statistics for the 36 months which ended on January 1 last.

This does not mean Georgia's traffic record is not improving. As a matter of fact this state led the entire country in percentage of reduction of motor vehicle deaths in 1939, with 112 fewer killed than year than in 1938. Nevertheless, 2,483 persons were killed and 86,343 were injured in the 36 months discussed.

Ninety-six per cent of these fatalities could have been avoided if some driver, in each case, had not failed to observe one or more of the common-sense rules of road safety. That is the startling fact which points the way through which not only 112 lives, but 500 or more, can be saved this year. Simply through more general observance of the simplest requirements for safe driving.

Illustrative of the effectiveness of the work done by the state highway patrolmen is the fact that, out of 12,502 cases made for traffic law violation, convictions or guilty pleas were secured in 94.82 per cent of cases disposed of. More than three times this number, 42,610, were given first warnings for violations of safe driving rules.

In view of recent criticisms from one or two out-of-state sources, it is interesting to note that, last year, nonresident drivers were involved in 748 accidents which resulted in 98 deaths and injury to 582. Georgia is glad to welcome tourists from other states and urges them to remain in this state as long as possible. But they must realize the necessity for enforcement of safety rules on the highways and should appreciate the fact that Georgia's 55-mile-per-hour speed limit is the second highest in the nation.

Hush! Hush!

Illogical it may be. Much ado about comparatively nothing, it is. But, because it is an election year and because the Republicans are clutching at mere shadows and straws in the desperate hope of smearing something, anything, of Democratic administration origin, Mr. and Mrs. America may, if they wish, answer the income questions on the census blanks in private. They need not affix their names to those answers and they may, in secret, seal the envelopes containing this terribly private information before they hand them to the census enumerators.

The fact that Mr. America willingly signs his name to far more detailed and personal data about his income every time he returns his income taxes, the fact that Mrs. America devotes much of her sartorial and cosmetical, home furnishing and automobile reactions to the end of impressing the neighbors with the financial status of her husband, doesn't matter.

The Republicans have said that it is unworthy prying to ask any citizen whether he makes more than $5,000 a year, or not. They have represented the entire country as in outraged indignation at this projected affront and they have so maneuvered things that the secretary of commerce has arranged all that secret stating, envelope sealing, anonymous answering rigmarole to protect the financial timorous householder among us.

It is to be doubted if many will avail themselves of this opportunity for secrecy. For even Republicans know, beneath the political upsurge, that the Census Bureau is utterly uninterested in the earnings of John Smith as an individual. It is the compilation of all the John Smiths and Jack Robinsons and John Joneses who make up Mr. and Mrs. America that interests.

Still, having fought the war single-handed, Finland is not at the mercy of friends.

In Chicago, grim police seek a store bandit who springs puns on the victim. Of course a pun while armed is a felony.

An American, leaving Russia after 10 years, says surprisingly that the living standard there has fallen a third in six months. Maybe it had a false bottom.

A summary of TVA engineering feats mentions the leveling of two mountains. Even then, the surface of the hillbilly band problem has scarcely been scratched.

The last of the big-time ball players struggle into training camps from near-by golf layouts, their vocabularies nicely limbered up for new encounters with umpires.

Editorial of the Day

THE INNOCENT BYSTANDERS SUFFER.
(From the Wichita Beacon.)
England and France declared war on Germany and in the six months that have followed the casualties on either side have scarcely exceeded one thousand. Millions of soldiers have faced each other on the western front and weeks have elapsed without the firing of a shot.

The same, unfortunately, cannot be said about other countries—smaller countries who did not declare war and did not want to engage in war but were forced to defend themselves, the unfortunate bystanders in the test of strength between the great powers of Europe and their empirical ambitions.

So far in this peculiar war the losses have been sustained, not by the countries who have declared war and are supposed to be in a death grip for control of Europe and large sections in other corners of the globe, but by little nations who want to go their way in peace but have the unfortunate handicap of being located in the path of the beligerents.

If war continues other innocent neutrals must be caught in the trap of Mars. Now Finland has fallen, Sweden and Norway face greater threats. The conflicting demands of the Allies, Germany and Russia make the position of Rumania extremely precarious. Belgium, Holland and Denmark are prepared for the worst. The Balkan states are in a constant state of semi-mobilization.

And when peace comes the smaller neutrals who have been drawn in the war will pay the price again. Seated about the conference table will be the larger powers who, by their combined strength, will be able to dictate the terms and never yet have they given themselves the worst of such a situation.

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

REBUKE FOR WOODRING WASHINGTON, March 18.—Behind the current ruckus over British and French airplane purchases, there is only one fact of real importance—the personality of Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring. Whether from narrow conviction or personal pique, Woodring has consistently sabotaged the President's policy of putting this country's industrial resources at the wartime disposal of the Allies.

Last Wednesday, the President's patience was finally exhausted by the new crop of intimations that "military secrets" were being disclosed to the French and British. He called Woodring to the White House, along with Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr., whom Woodring bitterly hates, and Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson, whom Woodring both hates and fears. In the presence of these men he announced, in the most unvarnished terms, that he did not propose to have his policy interfered with by his own subordinates. That a sharp rebuke for Woodring was intended, is frankly admitted by members of the President's immediate entourage.

THE TOWN GOSSIP The miracle is that the President took so long to lose his patience. Woodring is a small-time Kansas politician, with views and methods formed in the purlieus of Kansas politics. He had achieved the governorship of his state when the President named him assistant secretary of war in 1933. The appointment was purely political, and saw Woodring's rise to national prominence, which took place in 1936. The idea was to give Woodring, a fellow Kansan, a feeling of pride in the New Deal which would counterbalance their attachment to Alf M. Landon. Woodring was supposed to reign shortly after the campaign. But with a tenacity that would turn the average barnacle emerald green with envy, he has clung to the pay roll ever since.

A dapper little man with a nervous manner and a habit of talking in innuendoes, Woodring does not seem at first to be the sort of fellow who could do much positive harm. But he has a town gossip's faculty of making trouble, as was amply demonstrated in the French airplane row of last year.

At the heart of this ridiculous imbroglio was the fact that in December, 1937, Woodring had announced a competition for an American bomber. His specifications were greatly inferior to characteristics of the German Heinkel. The inferiority was discovered in the spring of 1938, causing the assistant secretary to reverse Woodring's procurement procedure, and get new bomber designs as superior to the Heinkel as Woodring's were inferior. The new designs were already complete the next fall when William C. Bullitt brought over a French airplane buying mission, put them in charge of Henry Morgenthau, and obtained a promise of broad co-operation for them from the President.

The Frenchmen wanted bombers of the superseded Woodring design, with certain improvements. Woodring, who had not learned of Johnson's new designs, immediately charged Morgenthau with attempting to disclose military secrets to the French. There was interminable bickering at the White House, in the course of which Bullitt told Woodring to his face that he wanted the French and British "to fight with jack-knives against an enemy armed with pitchforks." In the end, the President put his foot down, releasing the superseded Woodring bombers for French use.

The point of the story came a little later, when a member of the French buying mission crashed on the coast. Woodring had either failed to grasp the fact that his bombers were not the military secrets he had called them, or he simply wished to make trouble for his chief and for Morgenthau. Whichever his motive, he allowed news of his outburst to reach Morgenthau, who then reached Capitol Hill, where a senate investigation was promptly instituted. Even when the senators were finally convinced that the supposed "military secrets" had been out of date for nearly a year, disagreeable suspicions were aroused which have not yet been banished.

"NOTHING AGAINST HENRY" In the light of this story, it is easy to understand the President's decision to take supervision of Allied war purchases out of Woodring's hands. Supervision was necessary, in view of the fact that Woodring had been disclosing our domestic economy. At the same time, it was desired to make things easy for the Allies. Woodring had revealed his inclination to do just the opposite. The President, therefore, appointed Morgenthau as head of a special co-ordinating committee, including representatives of both the War and Navy Departments, but short-circuiting Woodring's French use.

Woodring's jealous annoyance at this development was concealed from no one around him. He was careful to maintain a correct public demeanor—if you asked him, he was likely to assure you, "I've nothing against Henry Morgenthau, not a thing in the world." Yet talking against Morgenthau of the most extraordinary evenness of mind, Woodring was at the same time encouraging a similar attitude among certain of the army men. And as the rumors spread in an ever-widening circle, the present nonsensical ruckus became inevitable.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

The Criminal Justifies His Crime.

It is, in all probability, 100 per cent true that every perpetrator of crime, in his secret soul justifies that crime, in some way, to himself. He appeases his conscience, for the time-being at least, with the argument of necessity, of desirability or, even, of high purpose.

Not the most depraved murderer but makes, to himself, some reason for the killing, of his victims. Warped logic, beyond doubt, but convincing logic to the warped soul which spawns, and harkens to that false reasoning.

The professional burglar or thief feels fully justified in his thefts because, forsooth, it is his business, his trade. The more he steals the greater a success he is at his chosen avocation. He even looks with scorn upon the honest citizen who works for a living.

The amateur thief, the one-time pickpocket, argues to himself that his own hunger, for food, for shelter, for amusement, for liquor or for drugs is sufficient reason for his desperate sale into crime. Or, perhaps, it is the thought of a woman, a girl, who sets his feet on the crooked way.

Many a young gunman, or hold-up, or sneak thief feels within himself what he mistakes for the warm glow of chivalry. For has he not risked his freedom and his life in a robbery to acquire the money needed to satisfy the desire for some woman, some sweet-heart he adores?

The Liar Lies, Because.

The liar thinks himself an honest man because, forsooth, some secret reason impels him to lie. Fear or greed or desire for gain is, in his estimation, so strong an excuse that a lie is no longer reprehensible, but merely a brilliant trick used by a clever man to gain a desirable end.

Even the fiend who perpetrates some vile crime upon the body of a helpless child, excuses himself because of the strength of his cruel, sadistic urge within his brain. "I am not as other men," he says to himself, "and it is not my fault I must succumb to the evil spirit that inhabits my soul."

So, whether the crime be petty or great, whether it be the lie that defrauds another, the trick that brings ill-gotten gains and leaves other bereft, or whether it be the more serious things of murder, of fiendish outrage or of sadistic floggings and torture of one man helpless in the hands of half a score, the criminal finds excuse.

Even though that excuse may be that he whips to "teach his victim how to live a better life." Even Hitler sends his legions to rape a helpless little nation under the guise of "rescuing" some artificially created minority, and Stalin showers death upon the Finns while proclaiming he fights to "defend Russia" from attack.

And the Japanese army carries death and destruction deep into China while on a mission of "pacification."

The World Needs Honest Men.

All of which leads up to the conclusion that the greatest need of the world today is for honest men.

Men honest enough to subject their own projected deeds to the microscopic scrutiny of honest self-examination. Men who will ask, before they take any decisive step, what is the real, hidden motive behind their plans.

Men who will not stoop to camouflage greed by declaring they desire only to serve their fellows. Men who will not seek to advance their careers or political graft under the guise of public good. Men who will not preach salvation for their fellows while keeping a calculating eye upon the collection plate.

Men who will not cast the first stone until they have purged their own hearts of evil, of greed and of sin.

Men, in short, who will be as honest in motive as in appearance, men who need no disguise and are not afraid to look the world in the eye and accept responsibility for every act.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Friday, March 19, 1915: "Frederick Zerbis, the newly appointed Attorney General, was taken to the Atlanta Federal prison, to succeed Warden William H. Moyer, has had a long experience in prison matters. He comes to Atlanta on April 1."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Wednesday, March 19, 1890: "It is rumored that several members of the Boston Ideals are willing to return to Atlanta and give a concert, if matters can be so arranged."

A Different Light.

Superstitious aviators, having finished Miami's 12th annual all-American air maneuvers, weren't sure they wanted to enter the one planned for next year because it would bear the unlucky tag of the 13th.

The folks running the affair put their heads together and came up with this name for the next one: Miami's 1941 all-American air maneuvers.

That made everything all right.

Communist Strategy

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 18. Probably the 1940 campaign will be one of the dirtiest on record. One indication of this is the obvious effort to smear chief G. M. Hoover. I don't know who started it. A signed column by W. K. Hutchinson of the I. N. S. directly quotes an unnamed "high New Dealer" as saying "a small group of New Deal brain-trusters have turned the character assassins on J. Edgar Hoover for the express purpose of driving him into private life. They are led by Tommy Corcoran."

I can't vouch for that, but for some time, it has been Communist strategy to get Hoover. The opening gun was a critical letter and speech by the great liberal Senator, George Norris. For the past several weeks, the Communist press has been complaining that FBI is an "Ogpu"—which is somewhat quaint, considering that the original Ogpu is a Communist invention and practice.

Senator Norris' charges are similar and arise from the same incident that excites the Communist's Daily Worker and the "Review" published by the Young Communist League—the arrest in Detroit of several individuals and in Milwaukee of one Senator Norris' letter at least intimates that they had not been charged with crime—they were not charged with an offense that had any odium attached to it. . . . The activities of the FBI should be confined to the apprehension and arrest of persons charged with crime." The intimation in all this literature is that these people were arrested for their political beliefs. Several were active leading Communists.

No Odium Attached?

All these intimations are false and obviously intentionally so. The arrests were made after indictment by a federal grand jury. May be there is "no odium attached to it" but the maximum statutory punishment on conviction would have been five years. In other words, the offenses charged were not only "crimes" but felonies.

This group was accused of being Communists but of recruiting, examining and forwarding men to fight with the Communist forces in Spain. It is forbidden by federal law to recruit here for any fighting force that is not an ally or associate of the United States in war.

The history of the case is not pretty, but it is the action of the United States attorney general and not of the FBI that needs explanation. FBI was ordered by him to drop it. As soon as Frank Murphy became attorney general, he ordered FBI to go ahead. These arrests were a result. As soon as Mr. Jackson became the boss he ordered the case dropped. There is a faint odor of politics, religion and Red influence throughout, but it nowhere touches the FBI, which is under the absolute control of the attorney general.

Pictures Published

Pictures were published showing some of these defendants handcuffed and chained together. This was done after FBI was clear out of the case and by the local United States marshal. There were no chains while FBI held them prisoners which was only after arrest and before arraignment—a few hours.

It was complained that the arrests were made in the middle of the night "ransacking 11 homes." It was a conspiracy case. As is known and acted upon by police everywhere, all conspiracy suspects must be arrested at the same moment—otherwise some will escape. Considering the hours of employment of these people, this could only be done in Detroit at 5 a. m.—which was 4 a. m. in Milwaukee. There was no ransacking, and only in one case of resistance was any force used—to break open a door. There was a proper warrant and all was usual and in strict compliance with the law of arrest.

Third degree methods were charged. They have never been used by the FBI. Consultation with counsel was freely permitted during the few hours FBI held these persons. This particular attempt to smear the G-men will prove a complete dud. I will discuss the others in future columns.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

A CROCUS AND ATAVISM

He was sitting on the terrace. In his right hand was a scotch and soda. He gestured with his left hand.

Before him in the garden was his spouse, toiling in the bed of flowers which ran at the foot of the terrace. It was a beautiful sight. A crocus is something to see. Even the common and rather prolific jonquil is something to see when found in profusion, heads all turned toward the sun like sun worshippers of old.

The gentleman on the terrace was encouraging his spouse. "Beautiful," he said. "Beautiful work. They seem to respond to your touch."

His spouse worked the faster. "It is atavism," he said, sipping his drink. "Atavism?"

"Yes," he said, "atavism. Every woman, digging in a garden, sees herself as the pioneer woman tilling a field of corn or hoeing up potatoes as food for her family."

I looked at him closely. After all, he had just started with his drink. It was a little early for philosophy.

"Do they really?"

"They do," he said firmly. "They may dress in silken garden trousers with a knitted sweater to match. On their feet may be shoes of the finest leather. But as they bend their lovely heads over the beds of flowers and dig with their tiny hoes and trowels, they feel themselves a daughter of the earth, making things grow. It is pure atavism," he said, taking another sip.

A GARDEN FOR EVERY WOMAN

He went into the house and replenished his glass. He came back, the ice tinkling against the glass.

"Do you observe women in a philosophical manner?"

"Well, at times—"

"I mean when they are in their gardens. It is most interesting to contemplate why women like a garden."

He looked down at his wife and hid her on with gentle words, verbally stroking the jonquils, admiring the pansies, making the iris bed purr.

"All women ought to have a garden. And almost every woman does," he said. "The smallest flat may reek of wet baby things or smell of cabbage in its every corner. But there will be a geranium in a pot or some bulbs trying to grow in a bowl of pebbles and water."

There was no possibility of shutting off his Sunday afternoon philosophy.

"You may drive along the poorest slum street and you will see a flower in almost every window, bravely saying that here is a touch of beauty. And a woman will be found who will turn from her wash tub or from her kitchen stove to give a look at the flower."

"It must be," I suggested, "they have more longing for beauty in their souls than do mere men."

"No," he said, "it is this streak of atavism which all women have. They want to have a hand in making a plant grow. Every woman ought to have a flower garden, even though it be only a geranium in an old lard bucket."

AND FOR MAN

He sat in deep meditation, watching his spouse dig in the earth.

I suggested there were men's garden clubs and that perhaps man liked to commune with nature and imagine himself back in the days of the pioneer when bread had to be grown from the earth, and not bought in a shop.

"No," he said, "man does not belong in a garden. A man's garden club is just an organization. It has no roots in the earth. Fishing, there is the man's atavistic return. He does not know why he likes to fish. It is because something in his chromosomes makes him want to fish for food to feed his family. And so he goes and works mightily to catch one small, smelly perch and bring it home in triumph. If he gets one large enough to eat, he consumes it with greater zest. He himself has torn this food from nature."

He replenished his glass again and stretched out in the deck chair, moving it the least bit to catch the afternoon sun.

"Women," he said, "ah, women. There you have the perfect example. She satisfies this urge of the centuries by making little flowers grow. Every woman needs a garden. Yes, every—"

His wife spoke. "Go," she said, "and sift me two large buckets of topsoil from that pile back of the garage."

He looked pained.

"Hurry," she said, "I need it now."

He put down his glass and went, darkly and muttering something. "Every woman needs a garden," I called after him.

"You," he said, "know where you can go."

I did. I took the deck chair. I'd been longing for it for hours.

When Trained Troops Will Not Stand, Other People Can Do Nothing But Surrender

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Americans have no monopoly of virtue, but they do have higher standards of sportsmanship and chivalry than the common people of Europe.

The difference cannot be racial, for we are all of the same stock. Poverty may account for part of it, for hardship makes people hard. And custom is a factor, also, for we are inclined to behave as our neighbors do and as our fathers did.

But there is another explanation, found deep in the marrow of America's stock. As natives of the west are descended from adventurous ancestors, who boasted that the weaklings never got there and the cowards never started, so the typical American is descended from those people of European stock who possessed the

GROUP TO DISCUSS METHODIST PLANS

Atlanta District Conference Will Hold Final Session Today.

Evangelism, Christian education, laymen's activities, and all other phases of the united Methodist church's world-wide program will be the theme of discussion at today's concluding session of the Atlanta district conference of Methodist churches at Grace church, according to Dr. Wright G. Henry, district superintendent.

Particular attention will be given the work of laymen in addresses by Smith L. Johnston, Woodstock, conference lay leader; Dr. Jere Wells, district lay leader, and his associate, Dr. J. C. Wardlaw.

At 11:30 o'clock Dr. William P. King, Nashville, formerly of Atlanta, will preach the conference sermon. Dr. King, former editor of the Wesleyan Advocate, is now editor of the Christian Advocate, the church's general organ for the southern section. For several years Dr. King has been a leader in Georgia Methodist affairs, and has been chosen a delegate to the general and jurisdictional conference by the North Georgia annual conference.

Final adjournment of the district conference will come at 12:30 today, Dr. Henry said.

Planes To Drone Over Boy's Grave, Fulfill His Wish

MILWAUKEE, March 18.—(AP)

Airplanes will fly over Billy Fischer's grave when he is buried Wednesday, just the way Billy wanted to have it.

Billy, only nine, was ill with a bone infection for two years. For the last year he was bedfast. He always wanted to be a flyer, so he made model airplanes while he was sick.

Then he knew he was going to die. "I'm all tired out," he told his grandmother just beforehand. And to his father, he said, "Daddy, I'm not a sissy," and told how he would like to have airplanes fly over him. So members of the Wisconsin Civil Air corps will fly over Wisconsin Memorial park Wednesday morning during the services.

HEADHUNTERS SLAY NINE IN PHILIPPINES

Mountain Raiders Attack Loveland Family.

MANILA, March 18.—(AP)—Headhunters from the wilds of the Cordillera mountains invaded the lowlands near Pantangan in Nueva Ecija province today, and beheaded a family of nine, reports here said.

Constabulary officers said they thought the attack was motivated by the headhunters' belief the lowlanders were invading their domain.

Two of Louisiana's congressional delegation, Representatives Mauney and Fernandez, opposed removal of the dock. Officers in charge have refused to answer questions about the long tow; civilians have been barred from the scene of preparations; and photographers have been refused permission to take pictures.

SHAFT MARKS SCHOOL WHERE 294 PERISHED

NEW LONDON, Texas, March 18.—(AP)—A 120-ton granite monument was dedicated today to the memory of 280 pupils and 14 teachers who died in the explosion of the New London school building March 18, 1937.

The monument is across the street from the new $400,000 school building erected with safety devices against a repetition of the disaster.

Discovers said, apparently was caused by an accumulation of natural gas.

LINER FINALLY SAILS WITHOUT U. S. MAIL

NEW YORK, March 18.—(AP)—The Norwegian-America liner Bergensfjord sailed today for Bergen without the usual U. S. mail which her owners are under contract to carry. "Too risky," explained Captain Mathias Anzjon.

Her sailing, set for last Saturday, was postponed twice because of a dispute with U. S. government officials over the carrying of mail.

The steamship company seeks to avoid entanglement with either British or German naval contraband forces.

MOSELEY URGES HELP FOR GUARD

Alderman Asks $100 a Month for Artillery Unit.

Alderman L. O. Moseley yesterday urged the city finance committee to allocate $100 a month to the 179th field artillery, Georgia national guard, to assist in paying expenses of the unit until it moves to its new armory at the Confederate Soldiers' Home.

Moseley's appeal followed a formal request filed by Major Walter B. Elliott, of the unit, who told committee members that despite the fact that the new armory is under construction, it cannot be occupied for several months and that the organization needs financial assistance, which the city formerly granted it.

Finance committee members took the appeal under advisement. Moseley is a captain in the guard, having been attached to the old 122d infantry for many years.

Good Morning—By Louie D. Newton

Blessed is He that cometh in the Name of the Lord; Hosanna in the highest.

"Who is this?" the people asked as the great procession swept through Jerusalem and on to the Temple. Jerusalem was accustomed to kings—to great kings like David and Solomon—but Jerusalem had never seen a king like this One who rode upon a borrowed colt. Nor has any other city or any other nation or any other age.

Listen! Someone in the great crowd has recalled the prophecy concerning the meek and lowly Jesus of Nazareth, and these words are shouted from the great throng marching in front of Him:

"Ride on! Ride on in majesty! In lowly pomp ride on to die. O Saviour meek, pursue Thy road with palms and scattered garments strewn. Ride on! Ride on in majesty! In lowly pomp ride on to die."

"O Christ, Thy triumphs now begin o'er captive death and conquered sin. Ride on! Ride on in majesty! The angel armies of the sky look down with sad and wondering eyes to see the approaching sacrifice!"

"Ride on! Ride on in majesty. Bow Thy meek head to mortal pain; then take, O God, Thy power and reign. Ride on! Ride on in majesty! In lowly pomp ride on to die!"

Hosanna to the Son of David.

Nazis Believed Pact With Reds Would Prevent War, White Says

By WILLIAM L. WHITE, Special Correspondent.

COPENHAGEN, Denmark. — (By Mail) — In order to understand what the German people think of Hitler's pact with Stalin, you must first remember that the German classes still think separately, as do the various strata in the outside world; so each has a special reaction to the Russian treaty. Yet when it was first announced last summer there was something which approached unanimity of feeling.

You could hardly say that all the German people then approved the pact, but you might almost say that the great majority admired it. Coming at the moment it did, it seemed to be the final stroke which would let Germany get Danzig without a World War, and nobody in Germany wanted a war.

Nazis Feared War.

So the German people admired Hitler's move without quite approving it. There was of course some sense of shock, because it was a violation of all the Nazis had preached on their road to power. Yet the average German feared a world war even more, and the sense of shock was obscured by a feeling of relief that war was now averted, due to the Fuehrer's brilliantly daring move.

They all knew it was a shabby trick, a betrayal of the old principles. Yet they could not but enjoy the consternation of the rest of the world. And, they argued, after all, if he had not got the alliance, England would have, and it is much better—no matter what we think of Bolshevism, to have the Russians with us in this particular situation, than against us.

Shock Forgotten.

It was exactly the sort of betrayal of avowed principles for expediency which the Nazis themselves would denounce as "typical of the Jewish mind." But now that it was done by the Fuehrer himself, although there was a sense of shock, it was swallowed in a sense of relief that there

Fences Add Protection, Beauty To Gardens, Mrs. Crown Says

Lecturer for Garden School, March 26-28, Discusses Walls.

Garden fences and gateways, when attractively designed and painted, add beauty and at the same time protection to your garden.

Mrs. Fletcher Pearson Crown, local garden expert, who will conduct The Constitution's annual Spring Garden School, at the Atlanta Women's Club, March 26-28, offers timely suggestions for fencing your garden.

"Backyard fences, not only serve as boundary markers, but give back yards privacy, and form a background which can be immediately available without waiting for hedges or vines to grow."

For brick houses, Mrs. Crown suggests brick walls, solid or open. Much of the charm of English gardens is derived from brick walls which surround them and give such a lovely background for weather protection to perennials.

rial borders. A brick wall can be less expensive if it is built to a height of four or five feet, then a substantial lattice fence of wood built on top of this to the desired height.

Wood fences, solid or lattice, are used with a white wooden house, and the solid bottom gives greater protection to the garden than when lattice is used entirely. And wire fences, covered with vines, or placed behind shrubby borders, are used successfully without detracting from the horticultural beauty of plants. But wire fences must be strong and durable, because flimsy fences usually fall when vines reach their beauty.

Hear Mrs. Crown discuss spring garden subjects at the annual Garden School. She will talk on "Summer Flowering Bulbs," "Annuals, and Their Place," and "Winning Ribbons in the Flower Show."

Garden clubs will be given prizes of $15 daily for the largest proportional attendance, and the club with the greatest total attendance for the three days will win $25. Friends may register for a club, too.

The class will start promptly at 10 o'clock each morning and is open without charge to all garden lovers.

This production will not be shown anywhere except at advanced prices at least until 1941.

WPA WORKER FOUND SLAIN AT CORNELIA

Man Apparently Beaten to Death, Police Who Found Body, Say.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. CORNELIA, Ga., March 18.—County authorities today were seeking clues to the identity of the slayer of 36-year-old D. Guy Marlow, whose battered body was found early this morning, partially hidden on the bank of a stream near the Southern Railway tracks a half mile from downtown Cornelia.

A coroner's inquest will be held tomorrow morning.

Cornelia Policemen Lee Cannon and Carlton York, who found the body after Marlow had failed to report for work on a local WPA street project, said indications were that he had been killed in a scuffle on the railway tracks and the body dragged from there to its place of concealment.

Marlow apparently had been struck about the face and head several times with some metal instrument. The officers said the skull was fractured, the nose shattered, and the rib broken. The condition of the body, they said, indicated he had been dead more than 24 hours.

Marlow was last reported seen alive Saturday night. He is survived by his wife and four children.

BUSINESS WOMAN GIVES HER FORMULA

Mrs. Lillian S. Dodge Says Marriage Is Best Career To Follow.

The blue-eyed, calmly smiling personage who is regarded as America's most successful business executive, still believes that woman's best career is marriage.

"To my mind," says Mrs. Lillian S. Dodge, president and owner of the Hubbard Ayer Company, "the finest job is to have a husband and let him make your living for you."

Remain Womanly.
But if you're a woman and must work, or want to work, then the right plan to follow is to remain womanly.

"I believe that every man has in the back of his mind the thought, 'Well, she's just a woman, after all,' when he deals with a business woman. Therefore, the worth of womanliness should be demonstrated. Women should be careful to retain their feminine qualities, their integrity and should seek success through them rather than in spite of them."

Mrs. Dodge, who was in town yesterday, has been at the head of the business founded by her late husband since his death in November, 1918. Previously she had been closely associated with him in its operations and had taken special interest in the composition of the products.

800 Employees.
Of English descent, although a native American, Mrs. Dodge had expected the normal career of wife and mother, yet she found no difficulty, she said, in entering the commercial field. She actively supervises every part of the business, which employs 800 persons. She is the mother of three children, of whom one survives. The French government has awarded her the ribbon of a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor.

Gwinnett Students Have a Big Time on First Visit to Atlanta

Here are the school children from the Bethesda Consolidated school, 23 miles from Atlanta in Gwinnett county. The majority of the group had never been to Atlanta before, and they are shown here at Grant park yesterday, gathered in front of the Cyclorama. They spent the day seeing a movie, the park, and the state capitol. They travelled in school buses and brought a picnic lunch to eat in the park.

BETHESDA PUPILS SEE SIGHTS HERE

150 Students Go to Show, Visit Capitol and Grant Park.

The 23 miles from the Bethesda Consolidated school, in Gwinnett county, to Atlanta was traveled for the first time by nearly 150 boys and girls yesterday.

The group of students at the country school was composed of the fourth through the tenth grades. The little 10-year-olds up to the big boys and girls 18 and 19 years old were in the city to attend a movie and to take in the sights at Grant park and the state capitol.

They left school early yesterday morning in three school buses, chaperoned by Nolan Evans, principal; A. T. Farrar, vocational instructor, and five other teachers.

After the movie, the farmer boys and girls, spic and span with scrubbed faces and newly polished shoes, opened their box lunches and forgot the city for a while as they ate in Grant park under the trees.

When the little motorcade left the park, to take a quick look at the capitol, one little freckle-faced boy shouted "It's fun, but let's get back home; I'm tired already."

BEEES IN GARAGE WALL ARE FROZEN BY COLD

WICHITA, Kan., March 18.—(AP) A swarm of bees lived in the wall of Dr. W. H. Gaume's garage for three years.

When they failed to appear after recent warm weather, he opened the wall. The bees had frozen to death in the unusually cold winter. Dr. Gaume shared 100 pounds of honey, stored in three years, with his neighbors.

Four-Year-Old Boy Drowned; Playmate, Lost 30 Hours, Safe

Girl, 3, Found Lying Between Logs, Protected From Cold.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION. ELLIJAY, Ga., March 18.—Tiny three-year-old Shirley Cantrell was safe and sound at home to-day, none the worse for her 30 hours of wandering in the woods, but Jerry Rogers, her four-year-old cousin and playmate, lay buried, a victim of drowning in cold Cartecay river.

When the two children disappeared from the Cantrell home, six miles east of here, Saturday morning, a party of 50 CCC enrollees from near-by Holly Creek camp joined neighbors in an intensified search of the surrounding woodlands.

Hours later, searchers found the body of the boy in Cartecay river, near the Cantrell home. Little Jerry was buried near his home yesterday afternoon.

Search for the Cantrell child continued through the chill night, and it was yesterday afternoon when she was found huddled between two logs, partially covered with leaves and brush, as if she had sought to shield herself from the 40-degree temperature. Frightened at first sight of the strangers, she tried to run, but was swept up quickly by sheltering arms which brought her to her home.

Though lightly clad, the Cantrell child apparently had suffered no serious ill effect from her overnight exposure, other than a few scratches and a natural hunger. She had walked about three-quarters of a mile from the spot where her little playmate apparently had fallen into the river. Little Jerry was a son of Mrs. Mary Rogers, and Shirley is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Grady Cantrell. They were nephew and niece of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Conner, who, with eight children, perished two years ago in a midnight "flash" flood at near-by Whiteside.

CITY COURT SESSION OPENED IN DECATUR

100 Civil Cases Scheduled for Trial Before Judge Guess.

City court of Decatur opened its March civil week yesterday morning with a calendar composed of nearly 100 cases scheduled to appear before Judge Frank Guess.

During the first day eight cases were settled before trial and two in open court.

March 25 a criminal week, with between 250 and 275 cases, will be opened. Judge Guess said yesterday he expected the term to operate on schedule with no extra session.

TAMPA POLICEMAN ACCEPTS PHONY COIN

TAMPA, Fla., March 18.—(AP) Counterfeit half-dollars have shown up in the Tampa area in the past few days and most folks have been warned to look out for the phony coins.

The police department's cashier found one today—right in his own cash drawer. It had been accepted unwittingly by a desk sergeant as part payment of a fine.

S.S.S. TONIC

must be good
So many people take it
—to increase appetite
—to boost energy

COUNTLESS thousands of men and women can testify to the benefits S.S.S. Tonic has brought them.

The facts are simple because of all conditions affecting the human body a low blood count is most desirable. If you feel run down... lack a keen appetite... have lost weight... don't give up until you restore those precious red-blood-cells back to normal.

S.S.S. Tonic must be just what you need to get you on the right road to health and happiness again.

In S.S.S. Tonic you get after the trouble in two ways... first you increase your appetite and better your stomach digestion—thus making better use of the food you eat—secondly, thin, weak, watery blood is made rich and red again thus giving you a boost in energy.

Try S.S.S., which any drug store can supply and no ethical dealer will suggest a substitute. The big 20 oz. size is a two week's treatment and represents a saving in the purchase price of 25¢.

Kidney & Bladder Troubles

Does your back ache so bad at times that you find it difficult to get up in the morning? Are you also disturbed and rest broken by having to get up three or four times every night? Do you suffer from burning, itching, or stinging pains in the back of your legs? Are you so nervous at times that you feel like you are going to fly into pieces? Do you have dark circles under your eyes? Do you feel tired, run-down, worn out and seem older than you are?

Do you suffer from swollen ankles, pains in legs, and rheumatic twinges? Do you frequently suffer from headaches? Do you have a burning, itching, or stinging pain in the bladder? Do you have a burning, itching, or stinging pain in the bladder?

The kidneys are provided by nature to clean and purify your blood, and to remove excess acids, poisons and wastes which accumulate and cause many troubles if the kidneys are not kept in the best of health. It is not unusual for the kidneys to become diseased, frequently may happen because of functional rather than organic or systemic disease.

'Another Sherman March,' Charges Smith in Senate

WASHINGTON, March 18.—(P)—Senator Smith, Democrat, South Carolina, called the attention of the Senate today to the case of Governor Rivers, of Georgia, who was arrested on a federal judge's order as an outgrowth of Rivers' protracted row with the now-outdated state highway commissioner.

Smith said the arrest was an invasion of states' rights in line with the pending legislation. "It's the logical sequence of events growing out of our departure from the constitution," he shouted.

"Sherman is marching through Georgia again. Were I the Governor of the state of Georgia, there would be another local secession."

U. S. COURT ACTION VIEWED AS GRAVE

'Permit Us To Settle Our Own Affairs,' Athens Paper Asks.

ATHENS, Ga., March 18.—(P)—Offer of the Augusta Herald's editor to "go to jail with Governor Rivers" as a protest against federal judicial "dictation" today led the Banner-Herald to express the hope that "the federal court will dismiss the action before it in the Georgia highway board dispute and permit us to settle our own affairs."

"We are confronted with a situation fraught with grave possibilities," says the Banner-Herald. "We believe it can be avoided without loss of dignity or prestige by the federal judiciary."

Under a federal district court undertakes to arrogate to itself the established prerogatives of the state's civil tribunal, it is time for those who cherish the principle of state's rights to speak out."

In the editorial offering to go to jail with Rivers, the Augusta Herald editor asserted:

"We do not want the federal courts snatching from us any semblance of our state's rights. It is high-handed, vain-glorious, and all out of keeping with the Governor's constitutional rights for a United States marshal to step upon a stage at a meeting of state employees and seize our Governor by the coat collar and drag him into a United States court."

"This action, as we see it," was Ed Rivers' first victory in the whole unfortunate affair."

HALIFAX ALDERMEN WILL GET FIRST PAY

Unpaid since the city was incorporated more than a hundred years ago, Halifax aldermen now want compensation for their services.

By a majority vote, the 18 members of the city council voted to give themselves an annual honorarium of $500 each. The money, however, will not be paid until 1941, when it is planned to reduce the council from 18 to 12 members.

U. S. JUDGE DENIES SUPERSEDEAS PLEA

news for W. L. Miller, deposed highway commissioner out of whose removal from office the contempt proceedings have grown, "fair notice" if they intended to seek a supersedeas before any other judge or before the circuit court of appeals at New Orleans.

2. A telegram sent to Federal Judge Deaver by S. Marvin Griffin, executive aid to Governor Rivers, that "newspaper accounts relative to his (Rivers') plans are without authorization from him."

3—Reply to Governor Rivers' statement made yesterday in Chattanooga that he had not announced plans to take national guard troops to Macon when he appears before Judge Deaver next Friday was made by L. A. Farrell, Constitution reporter, with the single sentence, "The news story is accurate and authentic in every detail."

The hearing before Judge Deaver on the supersedeas opened this morning. Herschel Smith, of Atlanta, assistant attorney general, represented Attorney General Ellis Arnall. Assisting him were J. B. Copeland and O. H. Dukes, of Valdosta. They were opposed by J. L. Branch, of Atlanta, attorney for W. L. Miller, who had O. W. Franklin and Homer Eberhardt, of Valdosta, as his assistants.

As soon as the supersedeas motion was filed by Governor Rivers' counsel, the court opened inquiry into a story written by Farrell in The Constitution on Sunday morning, which told of Governor Rivers' plans to take the National Guard with him to Macon on Friday, when he is scheduled to appear before Judge Deaver on the contempt hearing scheduled after his arrest in Macon last Friday night.

Statement Questioned.

Judge Deaver said the statement attributed to Governor Rivers had the appearance of intimidating the court. Judge Deaver said:

"The statement may not have been intended for intimidation of the court, but to the lay mind it created that impression."

Continued before Governor Rivers contended before the court that the statement was not so intended and did not purport to be a statement from the Governor that "armed forces of the state" would be assembled in Macon Friday to protect the Governor from incarceration in jail.

Deposition Asked.

Counsel for Miller contended that the statement was of such a serious nature that they desired that Farrell either appear before the court here to give testimony, or that his deposition be taken in Atlanta before a federal commissioner and then submitted to Judge Deaver.

The court recessed at noon to give attorneys an opportunity to communicate with Farrell.

About this time Governor Rivers, who is in Chattanooga attending a meeting of park officials looking for the development of Sitton's Gulch, near the Tennessee line, gave the following statement to the newspapers:

"I not only did not authorize it (the statement about troops) but I have not even made my plans."

Farrell: "Story Is Accurate."

Subsequently, Farrell gave his statement that "the news story is accurate and authentic in every detail."

When the court resumed session after this afternoon, Assistant Attorney General Herschel Smith submitted a cost bond in the petition for supersedeas. The bond was for $250 and was signed by a Valdosta businessman.

It was then that Attorney Branch, acting for Miller, asked the state's attorneys if they would "give fair notice" if they intended to seek supersedeas before any other judge or before the circuit court of appeals in New Orleans.

J. B. Copeland, one of the Governor's attorneys, replied that he could give an answer to that question.

Branch replied: "If such assurance is not given, it will be necessary for us to wire each member of the court of appeals stating that our requests had not been granted."

Whereupon Copeland replied, "I expect you had better wire."

Following the court's denying of the supersedeas, Branch stated he had wired each member of the circuit court of appeals at New Orleans that he expected to be notified if application was made to that court for a supersedeas, and that he be given an opportunity to appear and be heard.

Attorneys for both sides attempted to reach an agreement on some plan to expedite the hearing on the supersedeas motion in the absence of Farrell. Counsel for the Governor insisted that the court either grant or deny the petition and to this Attorney Branch objected, declaring that Farrell's statement was necessary and that even after it had been obtained he reserved the privilege of questioning any other person connected with the matter.

with the statement attributed to the Governor.

This was the status when court adjourned with the announcement from Judge Deaver he would be available if necessary during the evening.

Branch Challenges Arnall.

During the day Attorney Branch also challenged a published statement made by Attorney General Arnall to the Atlanta Journal on the question of procedure followed in the middle Georgia federal court.

Arnall, returning today from Florida with his family, declared he had no intention "to imply irregularities to the court" and added: "I was unaware until today that it was regular procedure in Judge Deaver's court to allow the prevailing party to prepare orders in cases of this nature. In my statement Saturday that I was sorry that Judge Deaver had also informed me I had no intention to imply irregularities to the procedure of the court. I hold Judge Deaver in the highest professional and personal regard."

HOLLYWOOD, March 18.—(UP)—Gracie Fields, darling of the London music halls and highest paid film actress in the world, culminated her long romance with Monte Banks, British producer, late today when they were married quietly in the home of her parents.

Fields and Banks, both 42, took the marriage vows before a handful of friends and her mother and father, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stansfield. Judge Joseph Marchetti performed the ceremony.

CONNELLY SCHOOL ENLARGEMENT URGED

A resolution asking city council to enlarge the Connolly school building was adopted last night at a meeting of the West End Business Men's Association. The petition asks that, if money is not available for expansion purposes temporary portable be constructed to alleviate "emergency conditions."

Principal speaker at the meeting was Mrs. George Berkeley, general secretary of the Atlanta Pilot Club. Frank G. Etheridge presided.

to attached, denies that he authorized the newspaper stories. The reason the evidence as to the newspaper articles is not taken by sworn testimony is that the witnesses are not available and their depositions could not be taken for at least a day or two, and counsel for defendants urge an immediate order on the supersedeas application, so that, if it is denied, they may have time to present an application to a circuit judge before Friday, March 22, when the defendant, E. D. Rivers, is to appear for completion of the record in the contempt proceeding. There is, of course, no occasion to call out the military, except to nullify by force any order of court that might not be agreeable to the defendant.

"No Good Reason."

Notwithstanding all those facts, if there is any good reason therefore a supersedeas should be granted. However, no such reason appears. As matters now stand, plaintiff is entitled to be in his office and under orders of both the state and federal courts, would be in it, except for military force used in defiance of both courts. He will continue to have the right until the supreme court of Georgia holds otherwise. Until that time defendants are under a duty by law to comply with the unsuperseded injunction of the state court, and they are under the duty of complying with the order of this court, unless superseded, though the Governor is reported as having no intention of doing so, even if supersedeas is denied.

No harm or injury can result to either defendants or the public from permitting the plaintiff to occupy his office and perform his duties pending appeal. If the supreme court of Georgia renders any decision which makes it proper to expel plaintiff from office, it will then be time enough to put him out. Until that time he is lawfully entitled to be in his office and to perform his duties. Both the state and federal courts are being defied and their orders nullified by the unlawful use of military force.

Machinery Needed.

When the state and national courts break down and can be prevented from enforcing their orders, then no citizen has any rights, because rights are nothing if there is no machinery to enforce them. For the defendants to permit the plaintiff to occupy his office at least temporarily could not affect any right which the defendants have or change their status in any respect. They should not be permitted to do so.

U. S. JUDGE DEAVER'S TEXT DENYING WRIT

NEW YORK, March 18.—(P)—Counsel for Father Divine, who recently lost a $5,000 suit to a recalcitrant "angel" of his retinue, said today that the Harlem cultist had a simplified solution for it all.

He wouldn't pay.

This unconventional disposition of the case—so far as Father Divine was concerned—was announced by Attorney Edward Potter about the time the lawyer for the "angel," Veranda Brown, a Negro domestic, had a judgment filed in the county clerk's office. (She had sued on the claim that when her money went into Divine's "heavenly treasury" it stayed there.)

"Father Divine," Potter explained, "will not pay the judgment or bond it. Father Divine says he will not recognize the judgment, because he claims it is contrary to his rights and to the justice of the case."

Meanwhile, some 600 followers of the little Negro evangelist picketed the state supreme court building in protest of the decision in the case of Brown vs. Divine until the police stepped in and cleared the front area.

The current issue of Divine's weekly magazine, "The New Days," appeared with this announcement, in which there was no reference to the suit, and which was described as "our father's message given whilst at the banquet table."

"I always reverse every malicious and prejudicial decision, and I will reverse this one or when I get through there will not be many judges living."

2,000 BUG TICKETS FOUND; MAN SEIZED

Any doubt that the numbers racket has staged a revival in Atlanta and Fulton county was removed yesterday when the county lottery squad reported arresting a Negro pickup man with more than 2,000 bug tickets, representing the day's business of 108 writers.

The Negro was listed as Jesse Reed, 26. He was held under $1,000 bond. Reed was arrested by County Policemen Burton Carroll, Fred Brodhead and W. L. Duncan on Peachtree street, near Cain street.

County police said it was the largest haul of tickets since the new anti-lottery campaign began a month ago.

The county lottery squad also arrested Garbett Davis, Negro, and Gus Whitney, Negro, on charges of lottery. A small quantity of bug tickets were seized from them, the officers said.

Britain Owns Patch in Garden Of Governor of Puerto Rico

Three Square Yards of Land Once Caused Big Incident.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

SAN JUAN, P. R., March 18.—

It is a little known fact that the Governor of Puerto Rico holds the key to the British Cable Company's communication system in the West Indies. The British cable landing occupies a corner in the grounds of the executive mansion of Puerto Rico by arrangement between the British and Spanish crowns dating back to 1860.

A few years ago the Governor of Puerto Rico decided that the big painted box housing the cable landing and relay station did not fit in with tropical landscaping. The Governor sent word to the British Cable Company requesting that the relay station be removed.

The response came from His Majesty's consular agent in Puerto Rico. The consul, with much to the Governor of Puerto Rico, informed the Governor that the relay station belongs to His Majesty the King of England.

U. S. Loses. "That so," the Governor responded and went next to the United States Department of State. The State Department made an international incident of the ownership of a plot of ground three yards square; and the United States lost the case. The property does belong to the British government and it all happened this way:

Back in 1860 when Puerto Rico had no wire contact with any part of the world the British Cable Company proposed landing a cable. The request was for permission to use a spot within the city limits of San Juan.

The Spanish military Governor, having something of the Chamber of Commerce secretary in his make-up, heartily endorsed the idea. And not, however, forget his duty to His Majesty the King of Spain and stipulated that the cable landing should be made on military property. He wanted to have the relay station so located that the Spanish army could take over, just in case.

With much exchanging of diplomatic notes the government of Spain ceded to the government of the British Empire three square yards of the Governor's backyard.

The cable was brought in, the relay station was established and the incident was forgotten.

Overlooked in Treaty. It was overlooked when the United States signed the treaty of Paris ceding Puerto Rico to the United States. The treaty should have made provision for transferring title to the cable landing site to the United States. As matters stand Great Britain owns a patch of land in the garden of the Governor of Puerto Rico and it looks as though nothing can be done about it.

A dozen American Governors have occupied La Fortaleza without so much as noticing the gray-painted box sheltering its relay station. It was off in a corner and bothered no one. It was Blanton Winship who first saw it. He landscaped the executive mansion gardens for the first time in about 400 years.

Today La Fortaleza is undergoing a thorough rebuilding. When the palace is made as good as new, the gardens will be dressed-up once more. The landscape architect has got to find a way of making His Britannic Majesty's cable relay shed inconspicuous in a bower of poincianas, or to conceal it in a deep shadow among young coconut palms.

MAPS WILL BE SOLD FOR FINNISH FUND

Depicting Finland, They Are Lithographed in Four Colors.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

NEW YORK, March 18.—Sale of beautiful, large-scale maps of Finland, as a novel method of raising money for the Finnish relief fund on a national scale, was announced Sunday by Herbert Hoover, national chairman of the fund.

The map was especially prepared for the Finnish relief fund by Otto G. Lindberg, himself a native of Finland, and one of the leading mapmakers of this country. The entire cost of the map has been donated by firms which supplied the workmanship and material for its preparation.

The map is now on sale at a cost of 50 cents by Finnish relief fund committees in all the states. They will rely in disposing of the map upon local committees, fraternal organizations, department stores, schools and individuals interested in the cause of Finland.

The new map is a model of workmanship, and is beautifully lithographed in four colors on heavy paper. It is the largest scale map of Finland ever published in this country and is the only map of Finland in modern type for the purpose of clarity and legibility.

Users of the map will find it easy to locate the cities, lakes and rivers of Finland. Altogether 635 cities and towns are correctly named according to local usage, as are 330 lakes, and 60 rivers. Railroads and major highways are shown and there is a special inset map indicating the location of the principal industries of the country.

on Welles were termed "far from satisfying the desires of the Allies."

The German terms purportedly were:

1. General and simultaneous disarmament on land and sea and in the air.

2. Formation of a small, independent Poland in the central part of the former state around Warsaw, comprising a population of about 10,000,000 or 11,000,000 persons.

Gdynia To Poles.

Gdynia would be a Polish port, giving access to the Baltic. The Poles would have a free port at Danzig and Polish commerce to the Baltic would be facilitated.

3. The Czechs, Slovaks and Hungarians would form a tripartite state, allied to the Reich, in which Germany would hold certain industrial and communications rights for 25 years.

4. Austria would remain forever in the Reich.

5. Germany would get back her colonies lost in the last great war within 25 years, or at least get certain colonial concessions or protection of German emigration to certain zones in Africa.

6. A Danubian confederation would be formed with the participation of Germany and Italy as great guardian powers, the confederation to include Russia, Bohemia, Yugoslavia, Slovakia, Hungary.

7. The Balkan status quo would be guaranteed thereafter with protection for such frontiers as Rumania's Bessarabia and Transylvania, and others obtained from neighbors after the World War.

Liberty of Religion.

8. Absolute liberty of religion. Germany's remaining Jews would migrate under the direction of Britain to Palestine, Italian East Africa and French Madagascar.

9. Absolute liberty of trade after the war with no trade barriers for raw materials and direct contacts for economic collaboration with the United States. Also facilitation of German and Italian emigration such as Italians to France's Tunisia and Germans to Africa.

10. Special treatment of Italian commerce at Djibouti (French port for Ethiopia) and also free passage of the Suez canal, beginning in 1945.

11. A new statute for Italians in Tunisia.

The Vatican source said that according to reliable information Hitler, in case this new peace move fails, is prepared to launch a "great offensive," of which the German attack on Scapa Flow was a warning.

BRITISH MINISTER TO DEFEND POLICY

Chamberlain Being Pressed for Answer to Brenner Pass Parley.

LONDON, March 18.—(P)—A calm defense of his national government against rebellious criticism in the house of commons was prepared tonight by Prime Minister Chamberlain as Britain sought some diplomatic counterstroke to the Rome-Berlin axis conference at Brenner pass.

The Prime Minister, energetic today on his 71st birthday, faces the most serious opposition of his term tomorrow when he speaks in commons seeking to justify his policy.

Not only must he explain conduct of the war but informed sources said he was being pressed to give Britain's answer to the rendezvous which Adolf Hitler and Benito Mussolini had today.

Informed circles expressed belief that three ministers were tabbed for discard by Chamberlain—Air Minister Sir Kingsley Wood, Supply Minister Leslie Burgin, and Lord Hankey, minister without portfolio. They speculated that three others were slated for new jobs—Anthony Eden, the present dominions minister, Major Clement Attlee, and Sir Archibald Sinclair, the labor and liberal leaders.

All agreed that David Lloyd George, the World War Prime Minister, was Chamberlain's in the hole as a possible cabinet member since, as one member put it, he "enjoys the confidence of the common man as few politicians do."

Chamberlain told the house of commons that Germany's weekend attack on Scapa Flow and details of British aid to Finland would be discussed tomorrow in his speech, both matters which have brought severe criticism of his government.

OTHER GOVERNORS OF STATE ARRESTED

marched away, Governor Joseph E. Brown returned to Milledgeville and strove to go on with resistance. Shortly afterwards, the Governor of Lee's army, Governor Brown was in his library late at night in the executive mansion.

He heard a train whistle and said to his secretary, "That's a queer time of night for any train to arrive." Shortly afterwards, he heard steps on the porch and as his secretary opened the door and saw a federal officer, backed by armed soldiers with fixed bayonets.

"I must see the Governor of Georgia,"

"I am the Governor. I am Joseph E. Brown. What do you want?"

"I have an order for your arrest. I arrest you, sir."

"I submit to arrest by force, but not by any authority of the federal government."

He Packs Up.

"I have a train here and must escort you to Washington City." "So the Governor packed a carpetbag and went to Washington City where he demanded his release from President Andrew Johnson. The President immediately said: 'Sir, you are free. Your arrest is illegal.' But the astute Governor of Georgia refused freedom in that city and insisted that the arresting officer and the soldiers escort him back to Milledgeville and release him in precisely the same room in which they had seized him. Thus the second arrest of a Georgia Governor.

"Governor Rufus B. Bullock, who figures as one of the characters in 'Gone With the Wind,' was not arrested while he was at the head of the illegal 'carpetbag government' in this state, but fled one night. The men of this state were the newspapers with their violent protests against his rule and one week, the attacks were so hot that Bullock feared for his life and slipped out of town. He made for North Carolina by train. The next day the leading men in the opposition party were aghast at his flight for, while they opposed his illegal rule, they had a desire the nation to feel that they were driving the Governor out of the state, so they rushed a party of gentlemen, headed by Honorable Allen D. Candler, to overtake Bullock and persuade him to return.

Called in Prize Fight.

"In February, 1894, Governor William J. Northen got 'het up' one Sunday night at the preaching by Rev. Dr. Broughton, who denounced the coming prize-fight between Corbett and Mitchell, which was planned to take place in south Georgia. Next day, the Governor summoned his attorney general, Mr. Joseph Terrell (after-

Electric Girdles for Ships Held Efficient But Costly Protection

Principle Not New to U. S. Navy and Earth's Magnetism Experts.

By THOMAS R. HENRY, For North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Equipping ships with electric girdles, such as that which protected the new British liner Queen Elizabeth against magnetic mines, promises to be an efficient, but extraordinarily costly measure.

For a relatively small ship, it is estimated by experts here, the expense would run somewhere between $30,000 and $50,000 and involve the use of an enormous amount of copper.

The general principles—although not the refinements which the British may have introduced—are well known to experts on the earth's magnetism and also to the United States navy.

Developed Independently.

Both German and British developments of the magnetic mine and of the electric girdle, however, were entirely independent of any American work. The general principles which must apply to both of them were explained by experts of the terrestrial magnetism laboratories.

Anything made of steel possesses, to some extent, a magnetic field. The bulk of the hull of a ship is this considerable, and depends to a large extent on the position in which the craft lies in the yards while it is under construction. The force is greatest if the ship lies end-to-end in line between the two magnetic poles, and least if it lies at right angles to this line.

The really significant factor about the ship's magnetism is the enormous distortion it may cause in the magnetic field of the earth in its immediate vicinity. The intensity of this field may be increased over a limited distance and in a certain direction as much as 200 to 300 per cent.

Balance Distributed.

This, experts believe, is the basic principle of the magnetic mine. It is the disturbance of the balance adjusted to the earth's field which makes the electrical contact and sets off the explosive. The principle was known to the American navy during the World War and some magnetic mines actually were constructed.

The possibility of the electric girdle defense, experts say, would be fairly obvious to anyone very familiar with the workings of magnetism.

The purpose is not to "demagnetize" the ship. It is to alter the magnetism of the craft so that it will produce a different distortion of the earth's field. This results in the mine being set off before the ship reaches it, at a distance sufficient to reduce the effect to a bad shock, at the worst.

SPIRIT OF ALBANY LAUDED BY JURIST

Judge Gardner Praises Work After Tornado.

ALBANY, Ga., March 18.—(P)—Praising Albany's comeback spirit following the recent disastrous tornado here, Judge B. C. Gardner also lauded the recent "clean" primary conducted in Grady county as he charged the grand jury today when the March term of Doughterty superior court began.

"You citizens have fought against the greatest of odds, and have won the admiration of the nation," he said with reference to the storm of February 10 here. Speaking of the law on public elections, Judge Gardner cited the Grady primary as a shining example of a "clean" election. "A country can be destroyed from within just as quickly as a city can be wiped out by an aerial bombardment," he added, referring to elections and the duty of citizens to vote.

PHILIP RHINELANDER SUCCUMBS IN N. Y.

Was Patriarch of Old Family; Son Figured in Sensational Case.

LONG BEACH, N. Y., March 18.—(P)—Commodore Philip Rhineland, patriarch of one of New York's oldest families, died at Long Beach hospital today after an operation. He was about 80.

The commodore was the father of Leonard Kip Rhineland, whose struggles to end his marriage to Alice Jones, daughter of a Negro cab driver, created a sensation 15 years ago.

Commodore Rhineland, one of 13 Rhinelanders listed in the Social-Register, had lived alone in his pretentious Long Beach bungalow since the death of his son in 1936, putting in his days and evenings his perennial title of grand marshal of all Long Beach parades.

The commodore was the target of a $500,000 alienation of affection suit brought by his son's wife, whom he refused to recognize. But the case was settled out of court.

Later, after a White Plains, N. Y., jury refused to annul the marriage, young Rhineland obtained a Nevada divorce with a reported settlement on his wife of $300 a month for life.

When the son died, his ex-wife declared she had "always loved Leonard" and bitterly inveighed against the father whom she accused of "snatching him from me."

COMMITTEE BOWS TO GANDHI PLEA

'You Must Obey,' Leader Shouts, Requesting Tolerance With Britain.

RAMGARH, India, March 18.—

(UP)—Mohandas K. Gandhi won the first round tonight in his crucial fight for a program of moderation in seeking Indian independence.

The All-Indian Congress committee approved the Nationalist leader's resolution calling attention to Gandhi's unwillingness to start a civil disobedience campaign.

As a sign of confidence in Gandhi's leadership in the fight to free India of British rule, the committee saw that all amendments contrary to the spirit of the resolution were withdrawn or defeated.

Thanks Committee.

Thanking the committee for its approval, Gandhi declared that he wanted to do away with British imperialism "but not British imperialism."

"I am always for compromise," he said. "Those who want to start a struggle immediately must start it on their own initiative. But in such case they should leave Congress, because discipline demands it."

"I want the good will of the British the same as I want Hindu-Muslim unity."

Contrary to his usual custom of squatting on the floor, Gandhi sat in a chair, so he could be seen by everybody as he spoke.

The Nationalist leader declared he would not be hustled into a struggle with the British until his conditions are met.

Hurts Challenge.

"If you don't like me, remove me," Gandhi shouted, "but while I am leader you must obey me."

Gandhi's opponents were not defeated by any means, and it was apparent they intended to carry the fight to the plenary session tomorrow. Some even challenged his right to be leader of the party on grounds that he is not a member.

There was little doubt that Gandhi would win this most crucial fight of his career. Gandhi demonstrated tonight that he still was ruler and leader of India.

TO RISE IN DECATUR

City commissioners of Decatur last night approved a petition, filed by Guy Rutland, seeking to rezone for business purposes a sector of Clairmont avenue and Church street.

Work of constructing a modern shopping center on the site will be begun immediately, Rutland said, following the commissioners' decision. The property was recently purchased by him in the largest realty deal in Decatur's history.

MABLE STAGES HIS ONE-MAN PARADE FOR ST. PATRICK

Decatur Man Carries Out Annual Custom 45th Time; School Band, Infantry Follow Him.

It was the day after St. Patrick's Day in Decatur, but Maury Mable, "the one-man parade," marched around the courthouse just the same—his forty-fifth annual appearance "in commemoration of this memorable and glorious occasion."

In frock coat, silk hat and emerald green tie, he began his yearly trek in front of the Decatur Boys' High school at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. He beamed and doffed that silk hat up McDonough street, around the courthouse, down Trinity place and along College avenue.

Peace in Ireland. In the back of his mind he knew that when "this memorable and glorious occasion" falls on Palm Sunday there will be peace in Ireland. And just in case he was followed by the entire band and infantry unit of Decatur's R. O. T. C.

But neither the lanky drum major in front nor the private in the rear rank, whose stature was comparable to the rifle he carried, drew as much attention as the white-haired, 60-year-old surveyor—Maury Mable.

The closest he ever got to Ireland was Keweenaw mountain, where he was born. It seems his mother had an ancestor who once lived on the Emerald Isle. That is the reason Maury Mable has paraded every St. Patrick's Day since he was 15 years old.

Thousands of Decaturites, who had seen it time and again before, lined the streets to watch the show. There was no cheering. They only waved back when the adopted Irishman tipped that tall hat or waved his arm, hampered by a tight-fitting coat.

This sort of thing will go on every year, Mr. Mable says, until the 50 mark has been passed. Then he will turn the responsibility over to whomever wants it.

"Faith and begorra," he said yesterday in an affected Irish brogue, "it's the best day I've had in a long time." Not at all tired after his long march, he reviewed the infantry unit as it returned to school, saluted the American flag when it passed, thanked the battalion leaders and went home.

His next appearance will be March 17, 1941, at 1:30 o'clock, in front of the Decatur Boys' High school.

FIVE SENT TO JAIL ON 'BUG' CHARGES

White Woman Given Three Months on Plea.

One white woman and four Negroes were given straight sentences in Fulton criminal court yesterday on charges of lottery. Sentences were passed by Judge Jesse Wood and John McClelland. Mrs. Sarah Richman, 40, pleaded guilty before Judge McClelland and was sentenced to serve three months in jail.

Rosa Wilson, 28, and Rosa Lee Bloodworth, 45, Negroes, were given sentences of three months each, while Willie Dixon, Negro, 22, and Lizzie Hamilton, Negro, were sentenced to serve four months on the public works.

FOOT-TICKLERS THINK NOVELIST CAN LAUGH

BOSTON, March 18.—(P)—Three Brookline youngsters are sure they can make Novelist Edna Ferber laugh, given a chance.

Reading published reports that she would give $100 to anyone who could cause her mirth, the trio went to her hotel armed with a large feather with which they planned to "tickle her feet." Unfortunately, Miss Ferber had checked out.

NINE BROTHERS WEIGH 230 POUNDS OVER TON

TWIN VALLEY, Minn., March 18.—(P)—There's a lot of weight to the Widme brothers. When all nine get together they tip the scale at 2,230 pounds, or nearly 248 pounds per man.

Joseph, Twin Valley blacksmith, weighs 330. Chester, the family light-weight, is a mere 209. The others are Leonard, Twin Valley, 291; Peter, Rapid City, S. D., 255; Andrew, Mahanomen, Minn., 245; and Julius and Clarence, Twin Valley; John, Crookston, Minn., and George, Mahanomen, 225 each.

Excess Waist Is as Easily Lost as Acquired

A Few Deft Twists, Turns Will Slim Your Midriff

By Ida Jean Kain.

That pungent remark of H. G. Wells—the effect that “She had a lot of fat that didn’t fit”—must have been inspired by the lady’s waistline! Whenever there is any excess, it invariably goes to the waist.

But that’s not all... sometimes the waistline overlap isn’t even due to excess weight! It may be caused by a settling down of the torso, which gives the same accordion-plaited appearance without the benefit of avoirdupois!

But whether pounds bundled about your middle or a slump makes you bulky, you can be an inch slimmer a week hence by—Easier, in fact! And what’s more, by riddling yourself of this midriff bulk, you can appear a good five pounds slimmer. It’s worth working for!

A few deft twists, turns and stretches will do the trick. Here are the emergency measures which will trim you down day by day.

Position: Standing on the knees on the floor, tummy pulled up, hands clasped back of head and elbows straight out at the sides. Movement: Keeping the tummy muscles pulled up, elbows pointed out at sides, bend acutely to the right, straighten up and stretch, then bend to the left. Continue for 10 counts, very stretchily and slowly.

In the next exercise, use a sawed-off broom handle for a wand.

Movement: Bend acutely to the right and try to touch the end of the wand to the floor—you probably can’t do it, but the effort is good slimming exercise for the waistline. Straighten up, bend to the left, and repeat 25 times, alternating sides. Throughout the exercise be careful to have the lower abdominal muscles pulled up, the trunk straight.

To add a twist to your wand exercise, sit on a low chair, with feet tucked in back of the front chair-legs for anchorage. Then hold the wand back of the shoulders, hands still near the ends. Pull up constantly with the lower abdominal muscles as you twist vigorously, first in one direction, then in the opposite. The up-stretch and side-twist tear off the waistline excess!

If you are serious about slimming down for Easter, and have it in you, here is one final exercise which works wonders.

Sit on the floor at one side of the legs, which are held together and folded back. Clasp the hands high overhead. Stretch up and hoist yourself to the other side of the legs. Keep it up for 25 counts, stretching and hoisting.

Are Women More Subject To Headaches Than Men?

By Dr. William Brady.

One reason why women are more subject to headache and backache with various disorders of pelvic organs than are men with pelvic troubles, is the morbid obsession known as “female weakness.” This motion has been wished on women from the dark old days almost up to the present time—in the last year or two lying on the label has not been encouraged by the government. It seems to make even the innocent, credulous, ignorant prospect hesitate, no matter how extravagant you lie about the nostrum in your come-on literature, when she finds no such assurance of wonderful benefits on the label. Labels these days rather give the makers and vendors of female weakness nostrums headache. It is the first time, since that doughty fighter for honesty in the food and drug trade, Dr. Wiley, led the attack on the evil, that the government has worried the fakery even a little. It really begins to look as though the dear old days of rank swindle in the medicine business are gone forever.

In the preceding talk about headache I said that the real cause of headache and backache as well, in women with any of the various pelvic disorders that may be associated with “female weakness” is introspection, anxiety, worry. I am positive about this because it is the everyday experience and observation of physicians that women having such pelvic disorders generally complain of no backache or headache if they are not informed of the abnormal condition. For this reason good doctors usually make no mention of these everyday minor pelvic abnormalities when they find them in the course of a general examination.

For the benefit of female readers who may harbor any misunderstanding or doubt about the “female weakness” fancy, let me repeat with all possible conviction that there is no foundation in fact for such belief. It is all a figment of morbid imagination. If your mind is troubled with any such worry don’t go on moping and brooding about it in secret. Ask your doctor about it. If you are unable to do that, perhaps you would find it easier to consult a good woman physician. If you can’t even do that, the state your trouble in your own way in a letter to me and I will give you the best opinion and advice I can—only please remember I am not qualified to make a diagnosis of an individual case, if that is the problem. Also do not forget to enclose a stamped envelope bearing your address if you expect a personal answer. I reckon I have special sympathy for anyone who has been misinformed about such matters, for I recollect how the charlatans had me worried sick before I learned enough physiology to recognize the vicious device in the nostrum and quackery propaganda and realized how largely my own ideas had been derived from that source.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Skill.
Six years ago had tonsil trouble at age 60. Doctor said operation not advisable owing to my physical condition. I wrote you for name of doctor skilled in discharging my method. You sent me to Dr. He treated me. Since then three different doctors have examined my throat, said it is as clean a job as they’ve ever seen.

(H. M. K.).
Answer—Thank you. Skill is the factor that counts, whatever the method used. Too many doctors who have undertaken diathermy extirpation have gone ahead hammer and tongs, without proper instruction in the technique by a physician who is master of the method. That accounts for the disappointment in instances where the patient chooses the operator on the eenie-meenie plan.

Unpressed Pleats

By Barbara Bell.

Casual nonchalance is the keynote of charm in this very new refer, cut along the lines of a coachman’s coat, which introduces the all-important feminine detailing in unpressed pleats. Posed for you by Paramount’s Louise Campbell, it has the gallant, youthful weather-wise look that matches your own energetic mood on brisk and busy days. It’s double-breasted, to keep your chest good and warm, and finished with a high lapel collar and two rows of buttons in the popular military manner.

This pattern (1809) is amazingly easy to tailor. The step-by-step sew chart tells exactly what to do. Make it of glowing tweed, plaid wool, or the new favorite, chin-chin cloth.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1809 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Corresponding bust measurements 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 14 (32) requires three yards of 54-inch material; 4 1-4 yards of 39-inch material to line.

Pattern No. 1809 can be purchased for 15 cents. Please remit in coins or stamps (coins preferred), giving your name, address, pattern number and size. Mail your orders to Barbara Bell Pattern Department, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga.

Let Him Talk About His Interests

By Caroline Chatfield.

Dear Miss Chatfield:

If your mother ran a tea room and a certain young man frequently it and always asked you to sit down and talk with him while he ate his lunch and his dinner but never asked for a date, what would you do? Suppose you were a young widow still in mourning for your husband but recognized that this young man was the type you wanted for a second husband what would you do?

E. B. S.

Answer:

I’d buy some gay costumes, or, unable to do this, I’d buy something colorful in the way of jewelry, and deck myself out to show that I was not really mourning in the sense that I was deaf to bids for dates. I’d sit down every time he invited me to and be as charming and chattering as I know how to be. I’d invite him to tell me all about himself, his job, his boss, his prospects and his ambitions. I’d draw him out to talk about the things he was most interested in and I would listen with rapt attention while he talked about himself.

When he dropped the conversation, I’d pick it up and continue to talk about the same subject; namely, him and “his’n.” I would see that he had plenty of hot biscuits and a second cup of coffee and a second dessert if he was sweet-minded. All the time I would give him the distinct impression that he was the star customer without whom the tea room would close.

And then when he had finished the meal, I would say nothing, but look at him as though I disliked to say goodbye and I would utter a silent prayer that he had wit enough to divine my thoughts and say: “What about a date tonight?”

I would keep this up until I lost heart, hope, patience, or whatever you call it, and then my true nature would begin to assert itself. I would say: “Aren’t you tired of coming to this dump? I’d think you would be. I’m tired of seeing you here.” Like that I’d cut my dear mother out of a good customer and cut myself out of a prospect and get myself another star boarder who could be moved by good food, good talk, an attentive ear and a big hand.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Woman’s Quiz

Q. How can a dustless dustcloth be made?
A. Saturate a suitable piece of cloth with kerosene, and lay it aside until the surplus oil has evaporated. Then rub it on a wooden surface until it no longer leaves a streak, and it is ready for use.

Q. What liquid is best for quick breads, cakes and cookies?

A. Whole milk, skim milk, and dried or evaporated milk diluted to the proper consistency, give practically the same results. Since skim milk lacks the fat of whole milk, extra fat may be added. In some cases a mixture of milk and water, or even water alone, may be used with no great loss in flavor or texture. For pastry, water is preferable. If cream is used as the liquid, it is not necessary to use so much other fat.

Have you a household problem to solve? Write your question clearly, sign your name and address, enclose a three-cent postage stamp and mail to the Women’s Editor of The Constitution, Washington Service Bureau, 1013 15th street, Washington, D. C., for a reply. Three of the most interesting answers will be printed here daily. Don’t telephone, write as directed.

Today’s Charm Tip.

Humor is outdistancing the “tint-listening” formula as the top quality for social success—but natural, unforced and good natured humor it must be—not the biting, deriding, unpleasant kind.

THESE WOMEN! -- By d'Alessio

“I wish I could have parked nearer, but ten feet away from a fireplug, the law says...”

MY DAY: Distinguished Men

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON.—Practically all day was spent on the train between Chicago and Hamilton, Ohio. There were no signs of spring, but much land outside of Chicago, just as on the trip from Kokomo, Ind., looked like fertile and prosperous farm land. There was little time in Hamilton for anything but the lecture, and after it was over, we drove into Cincinnati in order to leave early in the morning for Terre Haute, Ind.

In Terre Haute, I spoke for the Teachers’ State College in the early afternoon, and then Miss Thompson and I parted. She returned to Washington by train and I flew back. I always enjoy speaking at any institution where they train young people, but particularly where teachers are being given the start on an education which must continue all their lives. No real teacher can ever stop learning. The only way that one can inspire youth is to keep on being enthusiastic and eager to learn also. That can only be done if one touches new subjects constantly and opens new windows of the mind and heart that give one a zest for living and keep one eternally young.

In the February issue of Parents’ Magazine there was a symposium in which a number of distinguished men told what kind of men they hoped their sons would be. Each man, I imagine, reflected his own image in his answer, and some of the things which were said struck a responsive chord in me. Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the United States Public Health Service, ended with these words: “I hope each (of my four sons) may be a better man than I am and that their generation may be a better one than mine.” Such modesty has probably made of his boys just what he wishes them to be, and I think every one of us, fathers and mothers, would echo that same wish. If only our children can begin a little ahead on our own starting point, we will feel that our experience has counted for something.

Mr. Donald C. Peattie, naturalist and author, in the same symposium, expressed beautifully something which I have often wanted to say: “May my sons’ religion be a reverence for life. May they judge by this all things that come to them. May they never fail to feel that gratitude for being alive, which is indestructible happiness. May they worship, as the manifest glory of this religion, the natural beauty of the world, and see it never through eyes dimmed by materialism. So, true to an imperishable reality, may they become strong men for any fight, but sure of what they fight for.”

I am back in Washington today and, for the first time in some years, at home on our wedding anniversary. There is no special celebration, for we are rather an ancient married couple, but the President is going to see “Gone With the Wind,” which ought to be enough entertainment for any day in the year!

Glorified Sandwich Is Tops For Lunch, Sunday Supper

By Sally Saver.

Sandwiches are universally liked both by the person to be served and by the person doing the serving. As far as the housewife is concerned sandwiches fill in many places on the menu, with a minimum of cooking and dishwashing. That’s why a glorified sandwich is a good bet for luncheons and Sunday suppers. Here is one you will like:

French Toasted Cheese Sandwich with Tomato Cream Sauce.
THE SANDWICH: 12 slices bread.
6 large slices cheese, about 1-8 inch thick.
3 eggs.
3-4 cup milk.
2 tablespoons butter.

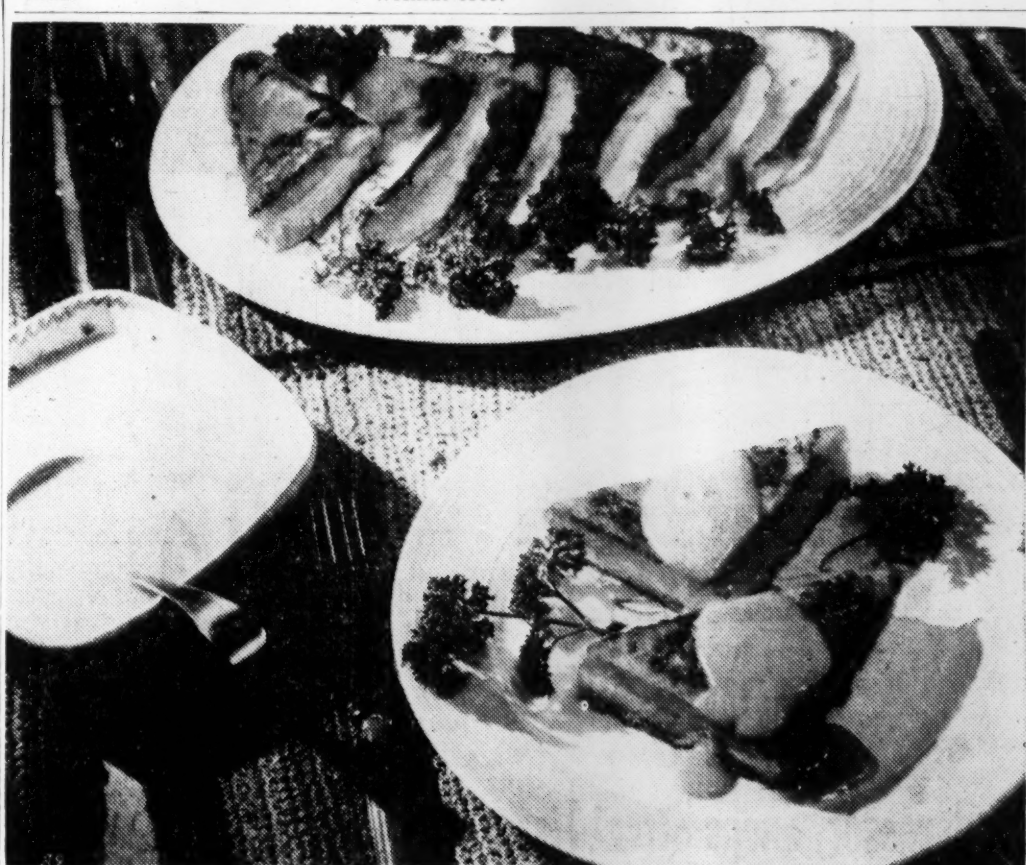

Trim crusts from bread. Put a slice of cheese between two slices of bread. Then dip sandwiches into egg and milk mixture and brown on both sides in melted hot butter or margarine. Brown slowly so that cheese heats and melts. Makes 6 sandwiches. THE SAUCE: 1 can condensed tomato soup.

Combine soup and cream. Heat and serve over the toasted cheese sandwiches.

These sandwiches, a fruit salad and hot coffee or tea make a perfect luncheon or supper menu.

“Pep-Me-Up-in-a-Hurry” Style

A Visit to Atlanta Stores

A movie star pose was struck by this attractive model and it is a safe bet that any movie director would sign her on the dotted line. She has the dash as well as the dot, in this outfit which features the tiny pin dot in crepe. Off comes the jacket and milady has on a white crepe top dress, the skirt being of the printed crepe. The ensemble is completed by a fitted jacket of the same material as the skirt. Note the upturned sailor hat which gives a pert appearance to the outfit. This model is a splendid “pep-me-up-in-a-hurry” style and gives oomph to any wardrobe. Call Lillian Mae at The Constitution for information as to price and place where it may be bought.

DeMille’s Wife Is Always on the Set On the First Day of a New Picture

By Sheila Graham.

HOLLYWOOD, March 18.—Gary Cooper gets his man in Cecil B. DeMille’s “Northwest Mounted Police,” but not the girl, which is something new. Gary loves Madeleine Carroll, and she loves him—until Preston Foster catches up with her. Say, Mr. DeMille, it’s going to be awfully hard to convince us that Madeleine can even look at another man when Gary’s in the picture!

Gary is all dressed up as a Texas Ranger. The two guns in his belt belong to Mr. DeMille, who loans them to his leading men for these outdoor epics. Gary used the guns in “The Plainsman,” and Joel McCrea had them in “Union Pacific.” “The chaps are my own,” says Cooper, referring to his worn leather pants. “I wore them as a kid.” He also wore them in “The Virginian.” Old as they are, they are still too new-looking for his role. A property man sprays dust over them—and Mr. Cooper. I like Gary’s spurs. They are big, round, spiking and make music as he walks, but I wouldn’t like to be the horse that has to take them.

DeMille, now in his 27th year of picture directing, has his wife on the set. She is always present on the first day of a new picture. The red carnation in DeMille’s buttonhole comes from Barbara Stanwyck, his leading lady in “Union Pacific.” Madeleine Carroll, by the way, has lost 10 of the pounds that disfigure her beauty in “My Son, My Son.”

Oh, yes, there are six assistant directors to Mr. DeMille, who likes to give orders to a lot of people. One of the assistants, Eric Stacey, got the job after giving as his recommendation, “I worked four years on ‘Gone With the Wind.’”

On the “Torrid Zone” set, Ann Sheridan is listening with an enraptured expression on her features to the mandolin playing of a handsome bit player, George Reeves. It is with the greatest difficulty that I pry her loose long enough to discuss the important subject of oomph. “It’s exactly a year ago that the oomph campaign started,” Miss Sheridan reminds me. “And I do believe,” she adds, “that my pictures are now catching up with the publicity.” (She keeps her fingers crossed while speaking, and for added safety, touches wood.)

“Torrid Zone” makes three good pictures in a row for Ann and gives her James Cagney as a leading man, which is her best break so far. Cagney is wearing a mustache. “But for this picture only,” he assures me. “They also wanted me to have sideburns. I drew the line at that. As it is, I look like an Argentine gigolo.” ‘Tisn’t so, they’d have to give him another face to make Cagney look like anything except the Irishman he is.

We discuss the tried and true formulas for successful pictures. “The love of a son for his mother is always good. So is religion,” says Cagney. “So is love,” adds Miss Sheridan. “Then this should be a good picture,” concludes Jimmy.

Pattern 6626.

Childhood’s most popular prayer, done in simple stitchery, makes an attractive panel for a youngster’s room. Pattern 6626 contains a transfer pattern of a 14 x 18-inch panel; color chart, materials needed; illustrations of stitches.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in coin to Household Arts Department, The Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. Be sure to write plainly your name; address and pattern number.

All-Day Outfit

By Lillian Mae.

Here’s a smart special for a busy woman. For you can be out all day long in this jacket-ensemble; then wear it graciously, serenely, to a social evening without changing. Lillian Mae has designed pattern 4413 with graceful flattery. Curved yokes come in one piece from the back to give a trim shoulder line and to hold soft fullness in through the bustline. They are aided by gathers above the nicely pointed waist seam. You’ll like the tall, slender effect of the front skirt panels that give well-placed flare. The long-sleeved jacket has the straight, becoming lines you need, and may match or contrast the attractive dress.

Pattern 4413 is available in women’s sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36, entire ensemble, takes 5 1/2 yards 39-inch fabric.

Send 15 cents in coins for this Lillian Mae pattern. Do not send stamps. Write plainly name, address and style number.

It’s smart to “sew your own!” And with Lillian Mae’s spring style book for expert guidance, you can have that well-dressed look always. Choose from dozens of frocks, suits, coats, home modes pictured. See the new silhouettes—peg-top, bouffant, apron and longer torso—shown in both sunlight and starlight styles. Sportsters, tailored and dress-up clothes for bride, career girl, hard-to-fit matron and young set, are all included. Order a copy today! Book, 15 cents.

SALLY FORTH Says:

Jane Blick and Her Fiance Choose Wedding Personnel

AT 6 O'CLOCK on Saturday evening, April 27, Jane Blick will descend the aisle of the Peachtree Christian church to become the bride of Fred Meatyard Jr., of Washington, D. C. Dr. Robert Burns will read the marriage service, and, of course, all their friends and relatives will assemble to see "the knot tied."

The pretty bride-elect will be given in marriage by her father, John S. Blick Sr., and she has chosen Mrs. Harold Milton Kiesel, of Washington, D. C., as her matron of honor. The bridesmaids will be Mesdames Charles Hoagland, Richard Harris, Owen Walker and Samuel Dawson Long, of Carrollton. Margaret Anne Lynch will be the flower girl and Larry McDonald will be the ringbearer.

The groom-elect has chosen Robert C. Varela, of Washington, D. C., as his best man. The ushers will be Don Irwin and William H. Clarke, both of Washington, D. C.; James H. Pugh, of Chevy Chase, Md.; Benjamin Krentzman, of Clearwater, Fla., and John S. Blick Jr., a brother of the bride-elect.

After the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Blick Sr. will be hosts at a reception at their home on Ponce de Leon avenue in honor of the bride and groom. After the reception, Jane and Fredrick will leave for a wedding trip, after which they will reside in Washington, D. C., where the latter is associated in business.

Prior to her marriage, Jane will be complimented at many social affairs. The first of the series will be a party to be given by Mrs. Richard Harris on Saturday. Mesdames Charles Hoagland and John Askew will entertain on March 30. Mrs. Owen Walker selected by one of Betty's close friends, Mrs. Frank Alexander, and were sent as a token of deep affection from her and her doctor husband. The friendship of the trio dates from the days when the Dutton family made their home in Cincinnati before coming to Atlanta, and though continents have separated them they have kept in close touch with each other by letter.

Mrs. Alexander wrote that she selected these particular blossoms because the pink and lavender hues would be especially becoming to Betty's pink and white complexion and her reddish gold hair. She had them fashioned into a lei because in Hawaii the garland is a token of love and friendship. She also wrote that the flowers were to cross the Pacific in very distinguished company, for the chief of staff of the United States army, General George C. Marshall, was a passenger on the same clipper.

Her illness is a source of deep concern to Betty's host of friends here and elsewhere, who hope for her speedy recovery. Her room at Emory University hospital is constantly filled with the choicest of house flowers as evidence of their thoughtfulness and the fact that Betty is keenly missed by those privileged to enjoy her friendship.

GLANCING through a recent edition of the Savannah Morning News, Sally was interested to note a lovely likeness of Belle Meador gracing the feature page of the society section.

Belle, who is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Meador, is spending some time as the guest of her sister, Mrs. Louis Little, the former Sarah Meador, at her home in Savannah. Prior to returning home the popular Atlanta will be entertained extensively at a series of social affairs.

TODAY IS a red-letter day for Mrs. E. H. Jones, for she is "taking off" this afternoon from Candler Field for points west. And the most thrilling part of the whole trip to Mrs. Jones is that she is going by plane, for she has been an ardent air traveler since she made her first flight two years ago in Miami with her son, Lloyd Fales.

Everything has been set for Mrs. Jones' visit, even to the cluster of exquisite orchids which were sent her by her son, T. W. Jones, of Greensboro, N. C., with a note which read, "To my favorite glamour girl." Plans had been made for him to be here today to wish his mother "happy landings," but business affairs detained him in his Carolina home, so Mrs. Jones will "take off" without his personal au revoir.

En route to the west she will stop in Fort Worth to visit her daughter, Mrs. William Overman, the former Louise Jones. From the Texas city she will fly west again, this time going to LaJolla, Cal., to visit another daughter, Mrs. Lloyd Fales, the former Mary Jones, and Mr. Fales. One of the features planned for her visit there will be attendance at the beautiful sunrise services on Easter morning in the Rose Bowl in Pasadena.

Miss Hill Weds George Crabb Jr. At Quiet Rites

PALMETTO, Ga., March 18.—Marked by simplicity and beauty, the marriage of Miss Virginia Hill, lovely daughter of Mrs. William H. Hill and George Arthur Crabb Jr., of Athens and Winchester, Va., was solemnized Sunday afternoon at the home of the bride's mother. Dr. Lester Rumble, pastor of St. Mark's Methodist church in Atlanta and cousin of the bride, performed the double ring ceremony in the presence of the immediate families and a few close friends of the bride couple.

Miss Nell Hentzen, pianist, and Miss Lois Callahan, vocalist, presented a program of music.

The improvised altar in the living room was draped with white satin and centered with an antique prism candelabra holding burning white tapers. Banking the altar were palms and ferns interspersed with candelabra. Pedestal baskets filled with white gladioli and snapdragons completed the decorations.

The radiant bride was gown in a costume of suit of powder blue wool and crepe, with which she wore navy blue accessories and a shoulder bouquet of orchids and valley lilies.

Following the ceremony Mrs. Hill was host at a reception. She was assisted in entertaining by Mesdames A. N. Brittain, T. P. Bullard and Miss Eva Mae Ivey.

The bridal couple left for a short wedding trip, after which they will reside in Athens through July before leaving for Winchester, Va., for permanent residence.

Women, Girls Learn Merit of "Build-Up"

A woman's periodical distress from headaches, nervousness, irritability, cramp-like pain may be due to this fault: functional dysmenorrhea brought on by an undernourished condition! There's convincing proof of this in the way so many women and girls usually stimulates appetite and the flow of gastric juice, so aids digestion; helps to build up physical resistance to periodic distress for many users. Others, who take it a few days before and during "the time," have found "CARDUL" helps ease their periodic distress. Used 50 years. (Adv.)

Third Baseman Roy Smith Slated To Get Cracker Utility Job

Call in The Game

by Jack Troy

Big Leaguer SAVANNAH, Ga., March 18.—There's no doubt about it. The Crackers have a big league third baseman. It undoubtedly was a master stroke, getting big Tom Hafey from the Giants as final payment for John Rucker.

Hafey, a Giant last season, has the big league stamp. President Earl Mann simply talked Brother Bill Terry out of a major leaguer.

Hafey has such a throwing arm that Manager Richards has found it necessary to caution him on double plays. Once or twice he has almost knocked young Connie Ryan off second base.

He is a defensive ball player and a hard hitter. He is the ideal Southern league type of hitter.

That is to say, he hits line drives and also has the power occasionally to measure the fences. Tom, of course, led the Southern league in home runs in 1938. He hit 24.

The Crackers won't miss Al Rubeling. Hafey has the situation well in hand.

And neither will the Crackers miss Russ Peters. Alf Anderson has landed.

Unusual thing about the Cracker infield, anyway, is the fact that all four members are prospective big leaguers—Hafey, Anderson, Ryan and Burge.

It's a Fact A veteran Cracker observed today that "if nothing happens, this club will start the season with better prospects than the 1938 club."

He's right. It's a fact. It is true enough that the 1938 team—Richards' first—won everything. Pennant, all-star game, Shaughnessy play-off and Dixie Series.

But that club did not show the promise in the spring that this one does.

For one thing, Tom Sunkel was an unknown quantity in the spring of '38. Bill Beckman was no house afire, either.

The pitching staff seemed sort of questionable. There were not eight or ten boys around that look as good as eight or ten do on the present staff.

There was not the suggestion of power that year as indicated by the boys with whom Richards is working now.

Nor was there the suggestion of hustle which is shown every day.

They outdistanced Baltimore in both games and have an idea the Orioles will be pretty lucky to beat them.

It's a sort of swashbuckling club of youngsters. They're not cocky but they're confident. And they have a lot of what it takes.

Used Rookies The Crackers have beaten the Orioles twice using a liberal sprinkling of rookies. Only rookies have been used as pitchers.

They might have beaten the Orioles worse in each game. As it was they beat them had enough.

The hustle of the young Crackers made the Orioles of Tommy Thomas look slow by comparison.

One of the Orioles writers, noting all the collegians on the Cracker roster, asked:

"What college song will you play over the loud speaker before these boys take the field during the summer?"

A Running Club Alf Anderson is one of the finest base running prospects the Crackers have had in modern years.

Alf probably is as fast as John Rucker and a much better base runner. He is the Ty Cobb type. He's alert. Quick to take advantage of an opposition mistake.

On hit-and-run plays, especially, Anderson will shine. He gets such a jump on the ball it's no trick for him to take extra bases.

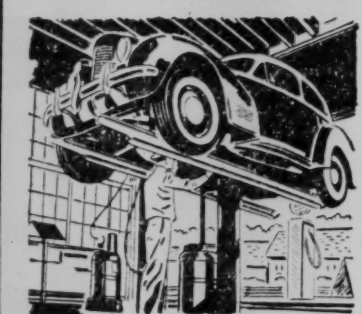

Alf seems to be thinking a jump ahead all the time. The Crackers will be a colorful running ball club. None of the prospective regulars could be termed slow.

Sammy Snead Tagged as 'Man To Watch' In North and South Open Starting Today

TOPNOTCH PROS AND AMATEURS IN $4,000 EVENT

Johnny Bulla Scores Practice 70 at Pinehurst; Demaret Absent.

By WALTER LOGAN.

PINEHURST, N. C., March 18. (UP)—The men in the locker room were saying tonight that Sammy Snead was the man to watch in the 38th annual north and south open tournament which begins here tomorrow.

Snead, who shot a 72 in the practice round today, did everything perfectly but putt. His drives were as long as any he has made, his approaches were perfect and if his putts had gone home he might have set some sort of a record.

Snead's 72 wasn't the lowest score posted by the 100 or more of the nation's great pros entered in the north-south, but the men who were playing with him said he was the hottest thing on the course. He shot the 72 after he missed 10 2-foot putts.

Johnny Bulla, with 70, rang up the lowest round of the day. Most of the pros failed to post their scores, but reported they shot in the high 60s. Bulla was in trouble only once or twice on approach shots.

The golfers were faced with a high wind which carried drives far to one side and made true approach shots hazardous. The difficult No. 2 championship course was in perfect condition, however, and accurate work on the greens saved most of them from too high scores.

Byron Nelson, defending champion, ran into trouble because of the high winds and said he shot a "high 70." Nevertheless, he was favored to repeat although his competitors included all of the big money winners of the winter circuit except Jimmy Demaret, of Houston.

Dempsey Says Jacobs Killing Boxing Game

Mauler Blasts Promoter's Monopoly; Ridicules Paycheck-Louis Fight.

MINNEAPOLIS, March 18.—(P) Jack Dempsey, busy as a movie star signing autographs for fans who could find their way to his hotel suite, gave his big right hand a rest today and delivered two opinions about the fight game:

1. Joe Louis is a "good, game fighter, who boxes better than many critics think and punches like nobody's business." But his jaw is weak and eventually a "puncher, a good, rough, tough guy, who can take a punch and keep on punching himself," will take away his heavyweight title.

2. Mike Jacobs (the New York promoter) is "ruining the fight game" and I don't mind being quoted.

In the Twin Cities to referee a fight tonight, Dempsey analyzed Louis' "weakness against a good punch" as about all that "keeps him from being a great fighter, but it's been shown too often that he goes down too easily to be called really great."

The former heavyweight champion blamed Jacobs for the absence of a fighter who could beat Louis.

"I haven't anything against Jacobs personally, but the fact is that he has a monopoly on the boxing game today," declared Dempsey. "That isn't a good thing for this sport or any other. Fighters must work at Jacobs' terms or they don't get any fights. The promoter ties up every good fighter in the game or he won't show them in New York."

The $4,000 open attracted one of the largest fields in years and a group of well-known amateurs who have earned as much fame if not as much cash as the pros—Ellsworth Vines, the tennis star, playing in this tournament for the first time; Bud Ward, of Spokane, Wash., national champion; Southern Champion Bobby Dunlopberger, of High Point, N. C.

CRACKER THIRD BASEMAN—Tom Hafey (left) is shown taking a cut at the ball in the Cracker training camp. Hafey, obtained from the Giants in the Rucker deal, is regarded by many as the best third sacker in the minor leagues. Roy Smith (right), rookie infielder up from Meridian, will sub at third and probably at other infield posts in case of an emergency. Smith is given the inside track to win the utility berth.

BULLDOGS BEAT FT. BENNING, 7-2

COLUMBUS, Ga., March 18.—(P)—The University of Georgia baseball team evnged up a two-game series with Fort Benning's Doughboys this afternoon by pounding out 15 hits for a 7-to-2 conquest in a game played at the army post.

The Bulldogs unleashed a four-hit assault in the first inning to score three runs. Snappy fielding by Coach J. V. Sikes' boys netted three double-plays. Bob Smith and Jack Clifton held the army men down for two safe blows.

Bobby Moore blasted out three safeties in five trips to the plate to share batting honors along with Catcher Emmett Lyons, who gathered two for three tries. Whitey Burnett clouted two singles for the soldiers.

Scott Is Re-elected Regional President

Major Trammell Scott probably is the only "triple president" in the land.

Although he sent in his resignation, Trammell was informed by telegram yesterday that he had been re-elected president of the Southeastern States' Regional Field Trial Association, a powerful group embracing 17 field trial clubs from Maryland, North and South Carolina, Virginia, Georgia and Florida.

Scott is president of the Southern Association of Base-

Indiana Coach Diagrams "Unstoppable Play," But Finds He Has 12 Men in Lineup; 220-Pound Center Enters Georgia.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.

Dixie Sports Shots: Tech, Tulane and Tennessee will be the football powerhouses in the Southeastern conference next fall, says Jack Meagher, Auburn coach. . . . He also says that Alabama will come up with another good team. . . . Gabby Hartnett's beaming smile has faded like a blue serge suit since Dizzy Dean signed his contract. . . . Bill Godwin, 220-pound all-state center from Blytheville, Ark., will enter Georgia for the spring quarter. . . . He's from Ears Whitworth's home town. . . . A little matter of $4,000 is keeping Joe Medwick and Don Padgett off the Cardinal playing field. . . . Both want $2,000 increases. . . . A seven-and-a-half-pound girl was born to the Medwicks last Saturday.

No Soap: Zeke Bonura poured his sales talk at Clark Griffith for over an hour Saturday . . . but it was no dice. . . . Zeke should know better. . . . he used to play for Washington.

Wise Cracks: Joe Engel—"That guy is a mighty good two-fisted eater . . . if he had three hands he would choke to death." . . . Lefty Gomez to Lefty Grissom: "Take it easy, kid, you're in the big league now."

Things You May Not Know: Red Ruffing has four toes missing from his right foot. . . . Bucky Harris nixed the proposed foot-race between John Rucker and George Case. . . . L. S. U. defeated New Orleans, 5-4, in 10 innings Saturday. . . . The Pels were blanked going into their half of the ninth, but cut loose with four runs to tie the score.

Crimson Face: Bo McMillin, the Indiana grid coach, assembled his assistants for a conference during spring training. . . . He took out a diagrammed play and said, "Boys, I've got a play here that never will be stopped." . . . One of his assistants looked at it for a minute and then remarked dryly,

NO MAT LINEUP BILLED TONIGHT

After staging three exciting shows in as many weeks at the Atlanta theater, the heavyweight wrestling brigade will take a rest tonight, this being the regular weekly date for grappling programs.

Matchmaker Bill Hartman had planned to pair off Dorv Roche with either Dan O'Connor or Dick Raines tonight, but Raines drew a six-month suspension for using the pile-driver on the Irishman last week and O'Connor sustained a concussion which will keep him inactive for at least six weeks.

To make matters worse, Roche injured his leg in scoring a hard-fought victory over Juan Humberto, the formidable Mexican.

Hartman is arranging a strong lineup for next week, he says.

L. S. U. BOXERS.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., March 18. (P)—Louisiana State's boxing team, champion of the Southeastern conference, will seek the national intercollegiate title here at the annual tournament April 4, 5 and 6.

JACK SUYDAM IS SET IN LEFT; CENTER IS OPEN

By JACK TROY.

SAVANNAH, March 18.—Roy Smith, the young infielder up from Meridian, has attracted the fancy of Manager Paul Richards and seems headed for a utility berth with the Crackers.

Smith, a third baseman, has a fine throwing arm and is a promising hitter.

"I'd say he has a good chance to make it," Richards said today

Chipman Sick

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 11.—Bob Chipman, rookie left-hander, tonight was added to the Cracker hospital list.

Suffering from a cold and sore throat and running a temperature, Chipman was under the care of doctors.

Connie Ryan, who was put to bed last night because of a similar ailment, probably will be back in action tomorrow. He was a lot better tonight.

as the hustling Crackers opened their third week of work under a bright sky.

Richards had Smith working out at second base. Connie Ryan, who has a severe cold, was ordered to stay in bed. He probably will be able to rejoin the club tomorrow.

The Crackers called it quits at noon today after a session of batting practice and other routine drills. Running was left off the program for a day.

The boys have had a lot of running every day and it is reflected in the general hustle and stamina.

It is indicated now that Jack Suydam is set for left field, with Emil Mailho in right. But center field still is open.

Willard Marshall and Marshall Mauldin are battling it out for center.

Mauldin is the better defensive outfielder, but Marshall seems the better hitter. Mauldin is vastly the more experienced. And yet Marshall is a real prospect.

Big John Griffin is making a real bid to stick with the club. Big John is a powerful hitter and a good fielder.

Lester Burge is caught in the throes of a batting slump and I. clards is glad it has come early. "As far as I'm concerned, Lester doesn't have to hit a lick until April 12," Slug declared.

Rene Cortes, the young pitcher from New Orleans, and Larry Miller, fork ba, specialist, have been named to pitch against Baltimore Wednesday at Millen.

Rollerdrome Players Defeat Tampa, 6-1

Rollerdrome hockey team defeated Tampa, Florida champions, by a score of 6-1, Saturday night at the Penn avenue Rollerdrome, before a crowd of about 600 people.

The action was fast from start to finish. "Red" Nicholls led the Atlanta attack with three goals. The other goals were scored by Carl Abbey, Dave Cochran and Tom Myers.

One-half of the game was played with a ball—as hockey is played in Tampa. The second half was played with a regulation hockey puck. The next game in Atlanta will be played in three weeks, with the Rollerdrome playing host to the representatives of Nashville, Tenn. The return game with Tampa will be played in Tampa in two weeks.

Red Sanders Is Named Head Football Coach at Vanderbilt

Sharp Shootin'
by AL SHARP

We were sitting in the sunshine by the eighteenth green at the Capital City course. Golfers were missing the green even as you and I.

"That fellow has the funniest swing I have seen," mused Pro Howard Beckett. "He takes a jump before he swings at the ball. How he hits it is a mystery to me."

As you can imagine, that statement led to some discussion, with Papa Beckett doing the discussing and the dub doing the listening.

"You know, I've been teaching for 25 years," rambled the pro while we dodged a few hooks. "I've been trying to find the one thing on which to base a golf swing. In other words, trying to eliminate all but one important factor."

"You can't give a man a lesson and expect him to remember five or six things he must do before he hits a golf ball. It won't work. Swinging becomes too complicated."

"For the past few years I've been experimenting with the hands. I believe that's the answer. Get a comfortable grip on the shaft and get the feel of a swing which doesn't tie you up."

"Say you're walking down the street. Your shoes are comfortable. They fit. You don't realize you have on shoes. They blend with your feet, so to speak. You don't think about them."

"Then put on a pair of tight shoes. They hurt your feet. Why, you can't even keep your balance. They worry you and you try to offset the pinching by keeping the heel of one shoe off the ground. You're trying to offset the tight shoes with your body."

"The same thing happens in golf. If your grip isn't comfortable, you try to offset it with the rest of your body. You may have to jump at the ball, or get yourself into a knot, just before the club head hits the ball."

"There are a lot of things you might do to offset an uncomfortable grip. You can't come through the ball free and easy as you should, so you have to do something."

"If you have a comfortable grip, though, everything falls into line. If you swing the hands through the ball right, the body follows as it should. The body, legs, feet and everything will do as they are supposed to simply because the hand action is right."

"Next time you follow the top-notch pros watch their hand action. They don't pivot much. They cut out every action that might throw off their timing—that is, every one they can. Do as few things as possible, in other words, while hitting the ball. Because the less you do, the less chance there is of getting off."

"When Bob Jones is hitting the ball, you want to see him pivoting much. But he knows that ball is long way. He gets the distance through use of his hands."

"Find a comfortable grip—the right grip—and one that will let you come through the hitting area free and easy. It doesn't make any difference whether you use a closed, open or square stance."

"Get that and you won't have to worry about your left foot or your right hip. They'll be in the right places at the right time."

"It was nice in the sunshine, but we had to go."

"There's only one thing about it," laughed Papa in farewell. "It's hard for a person to do that. Some of them have the devil of a time. And when I give them just one thing to remember during a lesson, some of them wonder if they're getting their money's worth."

"They're bound to save wear and tear on their clothes, though. Just think how much dubs have spent on repairs after putting the right foot in the left hip pocket during a vicious attack on a golf ball."

Roosevelt Gets Team's Credit
LONDON, Ky., March 18.—(P)—President Roosevelt was credited today with helping Hazel Green school win the Kentucky state high school basketball championship by no less an authority than the team's coach, Clarence H. Wyatt.

"We owe Mr. Roosevelt a lot," said Wyatt, explaining that until last year this little Laurel county school (enrollment 150) was without an indoor court. Then an $80,000 gymnasium, financed principally by a PVA grant approved by the President, was erected.

A gym apparently was all that the "Bullfrogs" needed, for they bowled over opponents from much larger towns in the state tournament in Lexington to share the title by beating Ashland, 35-29, Saturday night.

3-YR. CONTRACT AT $6,500 PER HANDLED COACH

Former Commodore Quarterback Will Succeed Ray Morrison.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 18.—(P)—The Vanderbilt University athletic board announced today the appointment of Henry (Red) Sanders as head football coach, succeeding Ray Morrison, who resigned to accept a similar post at Temple University, Philadelphia.

Sanders, an alumnus of Vanderbilt and present backfield coach at Louisiana State University, had been mentioned prominently for the post since applications began to come in to a three-man committee named to nominate a successor to Morrison.

Although it was not announced officially, it was understood he was given a three-year contract at $6,500 a year.

While a number of men were considered, as late as last week end, it had been reported authoritatively that Sanders and Bobby Dodd, former University of Tennessee star and now an assistant coach at Georgia Tech, were the two "favorites."

Sanders, a quarterback at Vanderbilt on the 1924-25-26 teams, started his coaching career as an assistant to Josh Cody at Clemson College in 1927. He moved to Columbia Military Academy in 1931, then to Riverside Military Academy in 1934 and four years later shifted to Florida, serving as head freshman coach.

He joined the L. S. U. staff in the spring of 1939, handling the backs and passing and punting. Prep school teams tutored by Sanders won 55, lost four and tied two games.

The 34-year-old coach is a native of Nashville, having resided here until his graduation from Vanderbilt. Besides football, he lettered in basketball and baseball while a student at Vandy and captained the baseball team in his senior year.

Although his hair is black, Sanders gained the nickname "Red" in early childhood. It was given to him by a boyhood neighbor. In playing kid football, Sanders always wore a red sweater, thus the name.

He is married but has no children.

THE MANAGERS AND THEIR PROBLEMS.

TAMPA, Fla., March 18.—The training season is in full blast now and the managers are wrestling with their problems.

At Winter Haven Bill Terry, more optimistic about the Giants than most other persons who have seen them or merely heard about them, nevertheless has a clear insight into their shortcomings. These are principally an uncertainty in the pitching department and the lack of a power punch.

To minimize these weaknesses as much as possible, Bill has been working doubly hard on his defense and trying to sharpen his attack. On defense, the pitchers have been drilled rigorously on how to field their positions and Bill Jurgens has been put in command of the other infielders to try to teach them some of his tricks. A play with which the Giants under John McGraw had a remarkable success—the cut-off of throws from the outfield to trap headless runners between bases—has come in for more attention this spring than in any spring since Terry has been the manager.

To bolster his not very robust attack, Bill has stressed base running. The use of a sliding pit under Terry indicates Bill's eagerness to squeeze every possible run out of his light-hitting crew.

Cronin is like a John P. Grier trying to beat a Man of War, a Discovery running in the shadow of a Cavalade. He has, in the Red Sox, a fine team. He has some of the best players in baseball—Jimmy Foxx, Bob Grove, Jim Tabor, Ted Williams and himself. He has plenty of power and may have better pitching than he had a year ago.

Save for the Yankees, he has I am convinced, the best team in baseball. But the Yankees are the ones he has to beat, and right now he can't think of a way to do it. Finding a way to beat the Yankees is asking plenty from any manager. It might be done. But it is a tremendous burden to place on any challenger.

The main problems now belong to Bill McKeechie—to keep his Reds up there; to Ray Blades—to carry his Cardinals on through to the top; to Leo Durocher, who made a brilliant showing last year.

I would say that McKeechie, Blades and Durocher have three of baseball's hardest jobs. Unless some one figures that Joe Cronin should beat out the Yankees. That would be the hot top spot of the game.

This spring Joe, dissatisfied with his contract, quit the camp to go back to St. Louis, and obviously would welcome being sold to Brooklyn. In the circumstances Blades has to make up his mind whether to pacify Medwick or sell him—no light problem considering the potential value of a satisfied slugger of Medwick's caliber on a team that has an excellent chance to grab the flag.

Durocher and the Dodgers. Leo Durocher, at Clearwater, has numerous problems. If he solves them all, the Dodgers will be the thickest of the fight all the way and might win. If one or two of them aren't solved, the team can fall back into the second division after the rousing showing it made last year in climbing to third place.

The Brooklyn infield is strong and the catching is good enough, even if it doesn't sparkle. The problems are centered in the outfield and the pitcher's box. Durocher has said that Joe Vosmik, after nine full seasons in the American League, will play left field and that the two other positions are open to competition among a dozen candidates, including Roy Cullenbine, Dixie Walker, Jimmy Rippe, Mel Almada and Ernie Kov.

BAUER IS SECOND WITH 80; LOUISE SUGGS QUALIFIES

Dot Plays Jane Crum Today; Suggs Meets Miley.

By DOROTHY KIRBY.
FOREST HILLS, March 18.—This qualifying business is a hard day's work here lately, and the work got under way this afternoon.

In fact, all of the matches are to be played in the afternoon, so that leaves all morning to sit around and do nothing. By the time the match comes you are really in swell shape.

There is a good field here for this annual tournament, and it is an open affair and that means that the women professionals can participate. Helen Dettweiler is the only one entered.

When all the players got in it turned out that, out of all the bunch, Grace Amory won the medal honors with a 78, which is very good golf. However, in accomplishing this she broke her spoon on the second hole, so that left her shy of a wood club, but it didn't seem to matter. Grace broke the club while trying to play a shot from behind a small tree in the rough on the second.

MAMI WINNER.
Grace also won the qualifying at the Miami Biltmore this winter with an 80. Medal play seems to agree with her. She doesn't think so much of her ability, though, for after her 78 today, she said she was just a one-round golfer, but I know better, for I have played against her and she is mighty hard to handle.

The next in line was Jean Bauer, who came in with some good golf for an 80. There were two 81's with Dettweiler's and Helen Siegel's. Helen Siegel is a pupil of Ed Dudley's and has a fine game. The scores then jumped to 84, by Jane Cochran, and then this is where I come in and I am not very proud of it, either, for I took 85 shots to get around, and that is bad in anybody's language.

I got off to a brilliant start with two 6's and didn't get a par until the fifth hole, and I was so weak after the shock of having a par that I could hardly stand it. The only nice thing I can say about that awful round of mine is that it was consistent, for I was out in 42 and back in 43. There isn't much I can find to account for this fact that I took 85 but that none of my shots were quite clicking. However, tomorrow being another day, I expect to do better.

SUGGS HAS 92.
Little Louise Suggs, from Austell, is a good hand and qualified with a 92, which is away off of her usual game. However, a 93 got in the first 16. Louise was complaining that none of her shots were going to suit her. In the pairings Louise meets Marion Miley in the first round, which isn't what I could call a break for her. However, Louise has a fine game, and if she is hitting that ball like she knows how, Marion will have to watch her step.

As for me, I play Jane Crum, who is a good golfer, and I will have to do better than I did today to get by.

Another little item I forgot to mention is that I am in the top bracket with Cochran, Dettweiler and Amory, with Bauer, Miley and Siegel in the lower just to name a few. So the going looks rough. I only hope I can take it.

Y.M.C.A. Triangles Meet Aces in Final

Henry Gray Gym Scene of Gold Medal Basketball Games Starting at 7 P. M.

First of the four divisional championships to be decided in the Gold Medal basketball tournament at the new Y. M. C. A. Triangles meet the Aces at 9 p. m. in the Class B men's section.

The Triangles will be seeking their second title of the year, for Coach Sol Marshall's quintet already has annexed the state Y. M. C. A. junior crown. To do this, the Triangles will have to defeat a team which already holds two victories over them. The Aces beat the Triangles last year for the Atlanta league championship and tipped the "Y" team this season in a civic league contest.

Tonight's program will open at 7 p. m. with a girls' contest between Kirkwood Presbyterian and the Grant Park Rebels. This is a playoff game to decide the champion of the city girls' "B" league.

Marsh Business College will play the police department at 8 p. m. for third place in the Class A men's tournament. The evening's schedule will close with a 10 o'clock game between Lithonia and the Deatur Rinkvyns playing the Alka-Celtics at 4 p. m. and the Pilots meeting the Junior Triangles at 5 p. m.

Today's junior tournament schedule, at Fulton High school, has the Deatur Rinkvyns playing the Alka-Celtics at 4 p. m. and the Pilots meeting the Junior Triangles at 5 p. m.

Amberg's Ace Saves Him and Charlie Yates
A hole-in-one, the first he ever made and the first he ever saw, by Harold V. Amberg, senior first president of the First National Bank in Chicago, yesterday at Brookhaven enabled the Illinois sportsman and Charlie Yates, his partner, to finish all even in an 18-hole match against Clyde Williams and Arch Avery Jr.
Mr. Amberg was frank to say it was his greatest thrill on a golf course. He shot a good game, and besides his ace, scored on the 160-yard No. 3 hole with a 6 iron, also did not require a putt on No. 7, tipping in a long one from just off the green.
The Chicago banker is pausing here on a spring vacation and will leave for Florida in a day or so.

TRAIL'S END

As Anne Eliot Alights From the Stage Coach, She Hears a Pistol Shot

By William MacLeod Raine.

INSTALLMENT III.

The audacity of the challenge choked for a moment the words in the big man's throat, for Carl Rogers had been editor of the "Powder Horn Sentinel" before Silcott and he had been shot down from ambush one night as he was leaving the office. The editor had been leading the fight for the settlers who had bought under the Armijo land grant claim, just as his successor was doing now. Nobody knew positively who had fired the shot, but Prentiss and two of his men had been seen riding out of town a few minutes later.

The stormy eyes of the foreman glared with the steady hard ones of this redheaded editor who walked into peril and through it with a jauntiness that was amazing. Jud had a wide reputation as a dangerous man. It was part of the stock in trade with which he ruled the wild, reckless employees of the Hat T. At the drop of the first hostile word, he was ready to fight. Most men side-stepped him when he was enraged. It was known he had killed two men, and there were whispered rumors out of his obscure past that spoke of others. But Jim Silcott had always showed a cheerful unconcern at his choler and this affected Jud as a red rag does a bull. Prentiss himself did not know why he had not trampled down the fellow's impudence, but some deeper hidden caution had restrained him. This puzzled and irritated Jud, for he was not afraid of any man alive. Yet for some reason he had always postponed the showdown that had to come.

"If you claim I had anything to do with Rogers' death—"

Prentiss did not finish the sentence. His blazing eyes, the dark rage purpling his face, were more potent than any words.

"Any claims I make will be in the 'Sentinel,' subscription price $1 a year," Jim answered, his voice low, almost gentle.

"Don't put my name in that paper, ever, unless you want to be in trouble up to your necks," the foreman ordered.

"Mayn't I even say that the editor had a pleasant chat with Mr. Jud Prentiss of the Hat T. who was in town with some of his riders Thursday?" Jim asked with light effrontery.

The ranch boss turned to his men with a gesture of strangled fury. "Let's get out here before I bump off this fool," he growled. From Sneve's thin lips a question dropped. "Why not now, Jud, since he's asking for it?"

"No, not now," Prentiss blurted out.

His fingers fastened on the girth suspended from his wrist. Hank let them run the superfluous energy out of themselves. Through the shining sage Anne caught a glimpse of a file of antelope silhouetted against a hilltop. After an hour or more the dusty road climbed out of the flats to ridges covered with pines. It dropped down again to the beds of streams fringed with cottonwoods, into which the horses splashed till the water was far above the hub of the wheels.

They came into foothills bristling with chaparral, from which strong arms held him back. At last Prentiss flung the sobbing man to the floor. His strong bow-legged stride carried him through the swinging doors to the street.

Sneve looked at the editor, his upper lip lifted in a sneer. "Some of the same for you next time, Mr. Editor," he promised.

"Painful, if true," Silcott said lightly.

The Hat T men stamped out of the Trail's End. The editor looked down on the whimpering man who was writing on the floor. "Better get him home, Phil," he said, trying not to show the contempt he felt. "Soda in vinegar will take out some of the pain."

He whistled to Pixie, and man and dog walked out of the gambling house. Silcott had changed his mind. He did not want to play poker just now.

Anne left the train at Beaver Creek and stepped into a world where she felt anything was possible. The air was like wine. Due to some trick of the atmosphere the sawtoothed mountains in the distance looked transparent. A desert of sage stretched away from the railroad tracks, through which ran a brown ribbon of road straight as a gun barrel.

Beaver Creek had one short street running parallel to the tracks and back of this a straggle of unpainted frame houses. The business street appeared to be mostly saloons with false fronts and pretentious names. One ramshackle building called itself the Palace, another the Fifth Avenue.

A man in a fringed leather shirt which hung outside his trousers carried her bags to the stage. He told her that he was Hank Brown, the driver.

She looked dubiously at the coach, its body swung on two leather thorough braces, which were attached to a standard at each end.

"Is it safe?"

"Lady, it's like riding in a baby carriage," he promised. "The leather swing will plumb rock you to sleep."

There were three other passengers. One was a Chinese with a queue and a blouse over flapping trousers. The other two appeared to be cowboys, somewhat dusty and unkempt and a good deal the worse for too much fancy riding from the Palace. They went into an immediate huddle over a bottle.

The four horses went off at a plunging gallop and the Concord coach rocked wildly. Hank let them run the superfluous energy out of themselves. Through the shining sage Anne caught a glimpse of a file of antelope silhouetted against a hilltop. After an hour or more the dusty road climbed out of the flats to ridges covered with pines. It dropped down again to the beds of streams fringed with cottonwoods, into which the horses splashed till the water was far above the hub of the wheels.

They came into foothills bristling with chaparral, from which

Anne could look back at a bend in the road on a desert that appeared to be dry, lifeless and torrid. Dust eddies were whirling in spirals across its sunbaked surface.

Before they reached Blanco the sun had sunk behind the peaks and left a lake of imperial purple in the crotch.

Hank brought his horses into town on the run and dragged them to a halt before the stage station. Standing on the wooden sidewalk, Anne looked curiously up and down the wide main street. She had seen a dozen like it from the train. The pattern of the towns of the high plains seemed to be set—dusty streets lined with false-front frame buildings. There was no attempt at beauty of design, no effort to soften the garish rawness. The arrival of the stage had stirred the place from its somnolence, but indolent loungers still clung to the saloon entrances. It seemed to Anne that nothing less than an earthquake could rouse these Rip Van Winkles to active life.

She changed her mind very suddenly. For in an instant Blanco had wakened from sleepy peace to violent conflict. The bark of a pistol started it. A bullet flung up a spurt of dust back of a man who was crossing the street.

Either the bullet or the jerk of the man's head when he stopped sent the wide hat skimming into the dust. The man stooped, reclaimed the hat, and put it back on his red head, then ran lightly for the shelter of a doorway. By this time he was the target for several guns. To Anne, watching him with suspended breath, it seemed he did not hurry. Would he never reach shelter? She expected to see him stumble and fall, but apparently he was not hit. His revolver was out now, and she saw smoke from its barrel as he moved.

The loungers had vanished swiftly into the saloons. Anne stood in her tracks only because she was too astounded to fly. She saw two of the attackers in doors, another at a street corner. They were shouting excited advice to one another. The intended victim had reached the deep doorway of an adobe building. Here he made his stand.

The lean lank man at the street corner, gave an exultant yell. "We've got him, boys!" he cried. "Come on."

Your Own Horoscope for Today

By ALICE DENTON JENNINGS, Noted Atlanta Astrologist.

What today means to you if you were born between:

March 21st and April 19th (ARIES)—Previous 24 hours more will be gained by abstinence than otherwise. Between 2:12 p. m. and 7:45 a. m. favors dealings in land, with older people and conservative ideas. After 7:45 p. m. guard against sudden changes.

April 20th and May 20th (TAURUS)—During the entire day and until 5:42 p. m. you can secure the friendship and favor of those who are able to be of value to you. This is the best period of the day to seek favors and adjust your affairs to better advantage.

May 21st and June 20th (GEMINI)—The best part of the day for new beginnings is after 10:45 a. m. After this time things may become confused, or there may be a misconception of the facts involved. The day on the whole favors general business and dealings in real estate.

June 21st and July 22nd (CANCER)—The day favors cautiousness and moderation. A feeling of strain and superfluity of abundance and therefore leads to an inclination to go to excess in talking, exercise and overeating. Be careful.

July 23rd and August 22nd (LEO)—Up until 1:32 p. m. the day favors dealing in real estate, affairs pertaining to the ground and continuation of work already started. Previous to 8:24 p. m. does not favor promoting friendships with important people.

August 23rd and September 22nd (VIRGO)—The entire day and evening favors continuation of work already started. Previous to 8:24 p. m. does not favor promoting friendships with important people.

September 23rd and October 22nd (LIBRA)—The best part of the day is previous to 11:45 a. m. this period favors travel, dealings with friends and for out-of-the-ordinary affairs. The remainder of the day and evening favors general routine.

October 23rd and November 21st (SCORPIO)—Today until 6:38 p. m. you should go ahead with courage and confidence, when you can advance your ambitions, but don't waste your time in frivolities. After 6:38 p. m. more will be gained by abstinence than otherwise. Between 2:12 p. m. and 7:45 a. m. favors dealings in land, with older people and conservative ideas. After 7:45 p. m. guard against sudden changes.

November 22nd and December 21st (SAGITTARIUS)—The day favors contacts and conferences and advertising should meet with spectacular success. After 8:09 p. m. does not favor changes, but sticking to things already started.

December 22nd and January 19th (CAPRICORN)—New beginnings today should progress quickly. Agreements, promises, dealings with professional people, finances and educational interests can take a new lease on life.

January 20th and February 18th (AQUARIUS)—Previous to 2:44 p. m. is a time to take everything with a grain of salt. Do not bank on judgment, for the chances are that you are wrong. More will be gained by going along the line of least resistance and not bucking fate. A good day to be conservative.

February 19th and March 20th (PISCES)—An excellent day to work on steady affairs, to obtain co-operation from others. Old affairs that have been dragging may be consummated, and effective work can be done on those things which are developed over a period of time.

MILLER MELODIES—Glenn Miller and his orchestra will be featured in another quarter-hour of song favorites in the 1940 manner and the Andrews Sisters will come to the microphone to present something new in the way of swing during the popular bandman's broadcast to be heard over WGST at 9 o'clock tonight.

Also to be heard in vocals will be pretty Marian Hutton and baritone Ray Eberle, regular members of the Miller band.

The program includes: "Prelude to a Kiss," Major; "Dinner Mouth Blues;" "I'll Never Smile Again;" "Jeanie With the Light Brown Hair."

CAVALCADE—The story of Sam Davis, 21-year-old Confederate spy, who chose death on the gallows rather than betray his superior officer, will be the subject of a Cavalcade of America air dramatization over WAGA at 8 o'clock tonight. Elliott Reid, youthful stage and radio actor, will be heard in the role of Davis.

The drama is based on a tale from Marquis James' colorful collection of historical sketches, "They Had Their Hour."

BIG TOWN—Edward G. Robinson will come to the aid of racket victims when he and Ona Munson, lovely young film actress, present another "Big Town" drama over WGST at 7 o'clock tonight.

Robinson plays the part of the crusading managing editor of the "Illustrated Press" and Miss Munson is cast as his favorite reporter, Lorelei Kilbourne.

INFORMATION—John Chamberlain, author of "The American Strides," and one of the Fortune Magazine editors, will join the "Information Please" board of experts during its broadcast heard over WAGA at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

With him will be those authorities on everything, Oscar Levant, John Kieran and Franklin P. Adams. The program will as usual feature Mr. Clifton Fadiman, America's most inquisitive interlocutor.

A Bad Example.

Robert E. Bradford, of La Grange, Ore., thinks his kick to the Post Office Department for delayed delivery of mail will receive better than usual attention.

The complaint was launched when a Christmas card arrived 18 days after Christmas.

It was sent to him by James A. Farley, who, as postmaster general, is responsible for expeditious movement of the mails.

TODAY'S COMMON ERROR.
Do not say, "The mob follow their leader," instead say, "followed its leader."

FLAMES CAUSE GREAT DAMAGE TO GEORGIA PINES

40,000 Acres Planted to Young Trees, 4,000,000 Burned at Estimated Loss of $5,155,000.

Of the 2,448 forest fires on protected areas in Georgia during 1939, more than 70 per cent, or 1,777, were deliberately set, Russell D. Franklin, assistant director in charge of fire protection of the Georgia division of forestry, said yesterday in announcing a reduction of fire losses as compared with 1938.

Franklin pointed out that ironically the people of Georgia planted approximately 40,000 acres of young pine trees in 1939 at an estimated cost of $200,000 and at the same time burned over approximately 4,000,000 acres of young pine trees, 100 times as much as was planted, at an estimated damage of $5,155,000.

Franklin reported that only 1.62 per cent of the 4,453,079 acres of forest lands under organized fire protection in the state were burned over in 1939 whereas 3.6 per cent were burned in 1938.

The areas protected through co-operation of the state and federal governments constitute about 21 per cent of the entire forest area of the state. The remaining 79 per cent is not under organized protection and approximately 25 per cent of this unorganized area burned during 1939 doing an estimated damage of $5,155,459, Franklin said.

Lightning caused only 20 of the 2,448 fires on protected areas, it was pointed out. The remaining 651 fires were caused by carelessness or accidental fires from burning debris, campers, smokers, railroads, lumbering operations and the like.

The 2,448 fires burned over 55,143 acres and caused damages estimated at $173,717, of which about 50 per cent was in young timber which in most cases was completely destroyed.

$5,000 IN THE BANK, SHE BEGS PENNIES

NEW YORK, March 18.—(AP)—Mrs. Louise Nelson, 74, went to court today charged with begging for pennies in front of a restaurant.

"Haven't you any money?" the court asked.

"Yes," said Mrs. Nelson, blandly, "about $5,000 in the bank."

She was ordered to jail for a day.

Back From War in Finland

Yesterday young John F. Hasey, of Bridgewater, Mass., rode into New York harbor aboard the Manhattan, a veteran of the Finnish war front where he drove an ambulance for the American Volunteer Corps. His arm seems wounded by a bomb fragment, and his big boots cover frozen feet, which won't be able to stand shoes for another two months.

MOVIE CHAIN PLANS THREE NEW HOUSES

Lucas and Jenkins To Spend $100,000 on Community Units Here.

The construction of three new movie theaters, at a total cost of nearly $100,000, was reported yesterday in Atlanta building circles. The houses are contemplated by Lucas and Jenkins, chain theater operators, in this section.

A seating capacity of 1,100 persons in a brick, fire-proof building on Capitol avenue, near Woodward avenue, will be the largest of the three proposed buildings. Work on this unit is expected to begin soon.

Reports say a second theater will be erected at Little Five Points, but details have not yet been completed. The third theater will be operated on Gordon street, near Gordon place. Work on this development already has begun, it was said.

At the CITY HALL

Spring and politics are in the air. That was conclusively proven yesterday when several visitors were invited inside the rails at city council's regular semi-monthly session. Among them were Senator G. Everett Millican, of the Fulton county district; Representative Paul Etheridge Jr., of Fulton county; Judge A. L. (Jack) Etheridge, of Fulton county superior court; former Alderman Roy E. Callaway, and former Councilman Tom Smith.

George I. Simons, general manager of city parks, yesterday put on a victory smile. The reason? All animals at the zoo weathered the winter without a serious casualty and without unusual illness.

Dr. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of Atlanta schools, will return to his desk this morning after attending a National Youth Administration conference in Washington over the week end.

W. F. Final, of the Public Administration Service, Chicago, yesterday began study of a job and salary classification for 3,109 municipal employees. Mayor Hartsfield has called a conference of all department heads for 11 o'clock this morning at which time Final and Carl T. Sutherland, city personnel director, will explain objectives of the studies and seek co-operation.

City council yesterday renewed the franchise of the Southern Bell Telephone Company for a period of 23 years, beginning September 3, 1940. The action was taken on recommendation of the tax committee of council, of which Councilman J. Allen Couch is chairman.

Resolutions praising the late Courtland S. Winn, former mayor of Atlanta and more recently assistant city attorney, were passed unanimously at council's meeting. The resolutions were presented by the claims committee, headed by Alderman G. Dan Bridges.

A total of 790 Atlantans yesterday were given credits for excessive water bills incurred during the January freezes. Many more petitions seeking relief are in the hands of examinations by the water department.

Mayor Hartsfield yesterday was empowered by council to create a municipal stadium authority to sponsor construction of a $500,000 bowl for athletics. The measure was offered by a special council committee, named several weeks ago to investigate the feasibility of the movement. It provides for a group of five citizens and three council members.

Revision of the city electrical ordinance, to conform with a recent supreme court decision voiding certain sections of the old law, were voted by council. It provides for examinations of all electrical contractors to qualify them as master electricians so they may supervise local installations, according to Dewey L. Johnson, superintendent of electrical affairs.

City council will take over the triangular plot at Meadowdale avenue and N. W. Avenue, under a council resolution sponsored yesterday by Alderman Raleigh Drennon and Councilmen Howard Haire and Frank Wilson, members of the sixth ward delegation. The finance committee will study a second proposal by the trio that the municipality purchase for park purposes a tract near Candler park, on Mayson and McLendon avenues.

Stewart Clare was granted the license to operate a community theater at 1137 Peachtree street by action of council yesterday.

Permit of Nick Danikas to operate a poolroom at 87 Georgia avenue was revoked yesterday on recommendation of council's police committee, and an ordinance was passed providing that in the absence of one of the city recorders for the conduct of both divisions of recorders' court. In the past, a recorder who was absent provided someone to substitute for him, but the new law empowers the active recorder to provide for the conduct of both courts.

Mayor Hartsfield and members of city council yesterday were invited to attend the annual dinner given by Grady hospital. Festivities will begin at 6 o'clock to-night at the hospital. Members of the Grady board of trustees and city commissioners also will be present.

Councilman John A. White, provisional mayor pro tem, yesterday broke a precedent of long standing. As a councilman, he presided over a meeting of the aldermanic board, a prerogative which has fallen to the lot of aldermen alone in years gone by. The Georgia general assembly at its last session amended the city charter to authorize a councilman to serve as city council's presiding officer. Council adhered to the old rule in electing Alderman Frank R. Reynolds as mayor pro tem, but designated White as provisional mayor pro tem. Reynolds was out of the city yesterday, and White wielded the gavel over the aldermanic board session for the first time.

Senator Adie Durden, of Alabama, was a visitor to the executive offices yesterday.

The State Board of Health will elect officers at a meeting tomorrow. The department's annual report and recommendations for carrying on the state health program also will be discussed. The board will make its first inspection of the department's new headquarters in the state office building.

Eugene L. Bothwell, head of the State Parks Department, was in Chattanooga, Tenn., yesterday attending a meeting of the Sitons Gulch State Park Advisory Committee. He will be back in his office today.

Colonel B. B. Zellars, assistant attorney general, was in Albany last night at a meeting at Harmony school in Cobb county.

Sam Boykin, secretary-treasurer of the State Highway Board, was proudly telling his capitol friends yesterday about his new adopted baby girl. Her name is Martha Alice.

Members of the Board of Regents and other officials yesterday inspected the new $40,000 library building at North Georgia College, Dahlonega. Among those present at the inspection were Chancellor S. V. Sanford; R. H. Driftmier, supervising engineer of the University System; G. J. Cohan, assistant supervising engineer; Regent T. Jack Lanier; President J. C. Rogers of North Georgia College; and L. P. Moore, PWA resident engineer inspector.

Copy of a resolution approving the surplus commodity program through which surplus food is distributed to various schools of DeKalb county was received yesterday by Braswell Deen, welfare director. The resolution was adopted by the Interchurch Christian Social Service of DeKalb county. It was signed by Mrs. Louis F. Reynaud, Mrs. George M. Connor, Mrs. E. J. Clower, Mrs. J. N. Fisher, Mrs. C. P. Roberts and Mrs. Charles L. Downs.
